DRUG BUSINESS IN PROCESS OF GREAT CHANGE

Skill Needed to Meet the Demands Made Upon the Stores by the Public

SEE GREATER CHANGE

Speaker Tells of Conditions in East—Big Program of Sports on Today

The great change which has taken place in the drug business since the early days of apothecary shops has not ended, the North Dakota Pharmaceutical Association, holding a three-day convention in Bismarck, was told today by C. Reinhold Noyes, president of Noyes Bros. and Cutler, St. Paul.

A greater reorganization in the drug business lies ahead, he said. In Germany there now are two classes, the strictly apothecary shops and the merchandising drug stores, he said. Specialization is increasing in the business centers of the United States, Mr. Noyes told the druggists.

He briefly described a Watertown, South Dakota, store which he said was unique in the Northwest. It is a drug store, handling only drugs and medicines and filling prescriptions. It occupies small quarters but is in a city large enough to support such a specialized business, he said. There will be other such stores in the country, he declared.

Big Task

"On the other hand I believe the greatest opportunity that ever faced the retail druggist lies in merchandising," said Mr. Noyes. "Turning the drug store into a high class department store for luxury merchandise."

He gave as an example a store in New York where there is a pharmacy department in one corner and the rest of the store is devoted to merchandising. The volume of business done by the retail drug store in the past has been so limited that it was difficult for a man to make a decent living, he said, but added that the way the business is being developed in the east the big volume of business is coming. The question, he said, was how best to take advantage of this and how to meet the revolution that is being worked in the business.

Other speakers emphasized the importance of the drug store and declared that the slogan, "Try the Drug Store First" is simply the embodiment of the sentiment of the public generally—that they have come to look upon the drug store as the place where they may get what they want at any hour of the day. They emphasized the skill of management necessary to conduct a store under such conditions.

Other speakers at the morning session included S. C. Henry, secretary of the National Association of Retail Druggists, of Chicago, and David W. Aberle, president of Henry C. Garret Inc. of St. Paul. Their talks were devoted to strictly business affairs. Mr. Henry telling how the national association was working in the interest of the retail druggists.

Governor Speaks

Governor R. A. Nestos opened the afternoon program with a short address.

An interesting feature was the question box on federal prohibition measures conducted by Arthur A. Stone, federal prohibition director for North Dakota, and J. B. Greason, narcotic agent in charge, Northwestern district, Minneapolis. They were the only speakers who discussed government "highlights" which the druggist is supposed to know and carefully follow.

The convention, which began yesterday morning at the Masonic temple, with a fair attendance had grown today until nearly 150 druggists had registered at noon when a picture of the body was taken. The yesterday afternoon program was devoted to business and last evening the druggists held a banquet at the Grand Pacific hotel, with Harry W. Gray as toastmaster, and then went to the Auditorium to hear the North-Western College Glee club.

Following the election of officers and disposal of other business this afternoon, a big program of entertainment was prepared for the druggists.

At 4 o'clock a 20-mile drive was planned, 50 Bismarck cars having been engaged by the local druggists for the trip arranged by the Association of Commerce. Following the drive many sports were planned for the program at the swimming pool. Tonight the annual ball of the druggists will be held on the McKenzies roof garden where other events will take place.

Tomorrow will be held the annual outing and picnic of the convention. Officers of the association are well pleased with the attendance. For many years the convention alternated between Fargo and Grand Forks, and this is the first convention held in Bismarck. A greater number of druggists from western North Dakota are here than ever before.

The Lahr Motor Sales company, distributors of Willys-Knight and Overland cars, have furnished "court-cars" for the druggists, the cars being at the hotels ready for their use at any time.

THREE DEATHS PUT AT DOOR OF MERCHANT

Aged Man Is Held Responsible For Tragedies in Battle Creek

Battle Creek, Mich., Aug. 8.—The body of Mrs. E. H. Stewart, 68, was found by a posse of searchers late yesterday 10 miles southeast of this city, bringing to three the number of persons whose deaths are blamed on John H. Wells, 70, retired merchant and reputed to be wealthy.

Wells early yesterday shot and killed his wife, Ella, 68, and himself. He left word with a nephew that he had killed Mrs. Stewart and placed her body in a clump of bushes some distance from this city.

Jealousy is the theory advanced by police as the cause of the triple killing.

The body of Wells and his wife were found in their apartment when detectives, called by neighbors, broke down the door. Both the man and woman had been shot through the head. A revolver was gripped in Wells' lifeless hand.

Mrs. Stewart was last seen yesterday morning when according to those living near the home, she drove away in an automobile with "an elderly man."

Police are working on the theory that Wells drove the woman to the woods, shot and killed her and then returned, killing his wife and himself.

INSANE MAN CASHES CHECKS

Gets Nearly $100 From Fargo Merchants, Police Learn

A Lee will be taken back to the state hospital for the insane at Jamestown late today, but he knows he's had a fine time since he escaped from there about a week ago.

Lee went to Fargo first and cashed about $100 worth of checks, one of them for $41. He represented himself variously as a farmer and a government detective. He had no trouble getting money.

Then he rode to Bismarck in a freight car on a Northern Pacific train, right through Jamestown.

He approached Chief of Police Martinson, telling him he was a government detective. His story didn't listen right and the chief called up Jamestown. They said they wanted him and a man came today to take him back.

40 BUSHELS BARLEY THRESHED

Jamestown, N. D., Aug. 8.—A field of barley on the Con Jansvold farm near Jamestown, the first threshing of the season in this vicinity, yielded from 25 to 40 bushels an acre and was of good grade. It was threshed Aug. 1.

The value of farm crops and live stock in Great Britain last year was $2,000,000,000.

ATTACK MADE ON COOLIDGE HOWLED DOWN

New York, Aug. 8.—A city convention of the Socialist party of New York nearly broke up in a riot when a resolution denouncing President Calvin Coolidge as a "reactionary and a foe to labor," was read by William Karlen of the resolutions committee.

All over the convention halls delegates leaped to their feet with violent protests against the spirit of the resolution and the terms in which it was couched.

"Kill it, kill it," roared from the auditorium and order was not restored until the chairman had ordered the resolution back to committee for revision. It was not presented again.

CO. AUDITORS HERE TODAY

State Board of Equalization Hears Their Arguments

County auditors of the state met here today with the state board of equalization and Tax Commissioner C. C. Converse to discuss matters relating to taxation.

The state board of equalization will hear the county auditors' arguments for the retention of the value of their respective counties for taxation purposes as fixed by the county boards of equalization. Tax Commissioner Converse probably will also go into intricate tax problems.

Practically every county abstract of assessments was in to the state board when the meeting opened, which was, Mr. Converse said, an unusual record.

MOTHER SEEKS RETURN OF BOY

Leroy Hipsher, 16 years old, is wanted badly by his mother, Mrs. Martin Hipsher, 1415 1-2 Dupont avenue North, Minneapolis.

Leroy left Minneapolis about August 1 bound for the Puget Sound region. He has not been heard from. He weighs about 145 pounds and is 5 feet 10 inches in height, with medium brown hair.

His mother appealed to Governor Nestos to advertise in finding him, and the Governor asked the newspaper men to give it publicity.

WARD TO PUSH COLLECTIONS

Minot, N. D., Aug. 8.—That Ward county intends to collect its seed lien claims from all able to pay or to obtain judgments, is the declaration of August Krantz, chairman of the Ward county commission, in commenting on reports in several newspapers that the county faced a knotty problem in collecting seed and feed liens, as the result of the recent supreme court decision holding liens are good only on the crop for which seed was furnished.

Outstanding unpaid seed and feed liens held by Ward county against persons who were furnished seed and feed in 1918 and 1920 total about $227,000, which includes interest to Sept. 1, 1923, according to figures compiled by Ward county officials.

NEWSPAPER ELECTION ACT IS DISCUSSED

Supreme Court Says Legislature Did Not Contemplate Bringing Them In It

DECISION OF COURT

Because it held that the case before it was not properly an equitable action the supreme court did not find it necessary to decide one of the strongly contested points in the controversy between the Ransom County Farmers Press and the Lisbon Free Press over the selection of the latter as official paper of Ransom county, but the court in its discussion of the case strongly intimates, according to interpretations placed here, that the corrupt practices act of 1911 does not apply to the case to newspapers which are candidates at an election the same as other candidates. The plaintiff and appellant had contended the Lisbon Free Press had violated the corrupt practices in offering to furnish to each voter of Ransom county a copy of its paper containing the delinquent tax list.

"The Corrupt Practices Act (chapter 129, laws 1911; sections 923-944, C. L. 1913) applies to all primary and general elections held in the state; but the language of the act indicates that the legislature intended that certain provisions should be applicable only to elections of public officers, while other provisions should be applicable alike to election of officers and elections involving some measure, proposition or question submitted at an election," says the syllabus of the decision, which was issued per curiam, or by all judges.

Adopted in 1911

"The Corrupt Practices Act was adopted in 1911. (Chapter 129, Laws 1911; Sections 923-925 C. L. 1913)," says the opinion. "At the time of its enactment there was no provision for the selection of official newspapers at an election. In fact, the same legislative assembly which enacted the Corrupt Practices Act, also, enacted a law imposing upon the county commissioners of each county in the state the duty to designate the official newspaper of the county. (Chapter 137, Laws 1911). The law providing for the selection of an official newspaper was enacted in 1913. (Chapter 187, Laws 1913). Hence, it is manifest that at the time the Corrupt Practices Act was enacted, the legislature had no intention that it should apply to an election held for the purpose of selecting an official newspaper."

Shoplifters Are Held in Minot

Minot, N. D., Aug. 8.—Minot police are seeking to clear up the mystery of recent shoplifting from two stores here. Mae Belle Shupe, 22, was arrested here when police found articles of clothing alleged to have been taken from the looked stores. Jay Madore, 23, and J. W. Cole, 25, were also arrested, both being found in a room at a local hotel with the woman. An effort to definitely establish the identity of articles found is being made.

MAKES ATTACK ON INDIANA'S EXTRADITION

E. R. Sinkler, Minot Attorney, Opposes Request to Send Jourgen Olson Back

HEARING IS HELD HERE

Matter Continued From Time to Time Because of Attempt For Settlement

Vigorous resistance to Indiana's request for the extradition of Jourgen Olson of Minot to face charges preferred as a result of the failure of the Farmers Bank of Newburgh, Ind., in which Olson was a stockholder, was voiced before Governor Nestos today by E. R. Sinkler, Olson's attorney.

To give Indiana attorneys here time to prepare answers to Sinkler's objections the hearing was adjourned until Saturday morning.

Sinkler asserted that "Indiana is attempting to collect a debt which we admit is a just debt, but North Dakota should not send Jourgen Olson back to Indiana to be co-erced into a settlement."

Declaring that under the laws of Indiana all stockholders were liable for the full amount of the bank's losses, Sinkler declared that the depositors in the failed Indiana bank would not lose.

The hearing opened yesterday afternoon but was adjourned with little action, because the previous request of the Governor of Indiana for Olson's extradition, issued some months ago, was revoked and new charges and a new warrant presented, which took Sinkler by surprise.

Hearing on the original request for extradition was continued from time to time because of the Governor's refusal to extradite Olson, because an attempt was made to effect a settlement in the liabilities growing out of the Indiana bank failure. He said Olson signed an agreement under which he was to give as security about 2,000 acres of North Dakota land, but the agreement was not consummated and the settlement was prevented by one or two attorneys in the matter.

Wants to Settle

"I believe the Governor of Indiana is a good fellow and is doing the right thing," said Sinkler, "and I believe it would be good judgment to continue it further, and a settlement may yet be effected."

He admitted Olson was civilly liable but denied that he was criminally liable.

Sinkler also attacked the three counts against Olson, raising numerous technical objections. The counts charged conspiracy to obtain money under false pretenses, obtaining money under false pretenses and grand larceny. He alleged that with respect to the first two charges the statute of limitations has expired, the offenses complained of, he said, being charged as of November 1, 1917.

Sinkler asserted that the charge made in one count that Olson accepted good will of the Farmers Bank of Newburgh, Ind., on October 11, 1921, was false because Olson was in Minot during that time while Sinkler and Attorney Pauls of Minot were in Indiana trying to straighten up the bank affairs. With respect to Arthur Halvorson and John C. Edinger, charged jointly with Sinkler, the latter asserted Edinger was now in Indiana.

Three Representatives Here

The state of Indiana is represented here by Fred C. Whitaker of the state banking department, H. A. Bippus, prosecuting attorney of Warrick county, and Judge Thomas W. Lindsey of Evansville, assisting the state.

The affidavit on which the extradition of Olson was asked was in fact obtained under false pretenses, obtaining money under false pretenses and grand larceny.

"It is charged that Olson obtained $115,000.00 from the Farmers Bank of Newburgh, Indiana," said Judge Lindsey. "It is alleged that he had accepted money from the people of the community that the stockholders were worth more than a million dollars and that every dollar deposited in the bank was backed by them. It is charged by the state that he withdrew money from the bank and placed it in worthless paper, such as stock in North Dakota corporations of his, mortgages and lands of none or little value."

Prosecuting Attorney Bippus added that two suicides had grown out of the failure of the bank in Indiana, the indictments on which the board of directors of the bank whom he alleged were innocent of the transactions.

Request Revoked

At the opening of the hearing yesterday afternoon Prosecuting Attorney Bippus announced that the requisition on which Governor McCrory several months ago asked extradition of Olson had been revoked, and presented new affidavits and requisition of the Indiana executive.

The indictments on which the first extradition was asked were quashed by the circuit court of Vanderburgh county, Indiana, to which the matter had been sent on change of venue, he said.

E. R. Sinkler, Minot attorney, representing Olson, was taken by surprise by the presenting of new charges. (Continued on Page Three)

GERMANS ALSO SPURN BRITISH DEBT PROPOSAL

Chancellor Cuno in Speech Says That Conditions Are Unpleasant

SITUATION IS SERIOUS

Greatest Confusion Obtains in the Retail Markets Throughout Berlin

Berlin, Aug. 8.—Chancellor Cuno in his promised speech in the Reichstag on the reparations situation today dealt particularly with the proposals for a settlement recently advanced by Great Britain.

The chancellor said the principles on which Great Britain had based her proposals were unpleasant to Germany.

GREAT CONFUSION

Berlin, Aug. 8.—(By the Associated Press)—Utter confusion prevailed in the retail situation in all lines in Greater Berlin yesterday due to the continued plunging of the mark and the consequent fantastic rise of the dollar.

While the food situation continued to show a chronic shortage in ordinary staples, hourly rises of prices caused by the fluctuation of the mark are projecting a new and serious element into the situation, as the retailers are withdrawing their wares from sale whenever the customers refuse to pay prices based on the gold mark or the dollar units.

Shopkeepers Proclaim Strike

As the latter procedure results in the price ranges which are prohibited under the emergency ordinances, the shopkeepers' union has proclaimed a general strike for Thursday and all retail establishments except food shops will close for a day as a protest against conditions under which they are expected to operate.

Their chief objection is being directed against the prohibition of price quotations based on the gold unit.

Many shops throughout the city already have shut down, barricading their doors and emptying the shop windows of all display.

Meanwhile the government is making hectic efforts to prevent the situation from lapsing into a state of unmanageable chaos and is hastening its program of tax and financial measures.

The dollar rate fluctuated between three and four million marks to the dollar throughout the day.

GOVERNOR FOR CALLING OF U. S. CONGRESS

Governor R. A. Nestos has written to President Calvin Coolidge calling attention to a letter he addressed to President Harding late in July and reiterating and re-emphasizing his belief that a special session of Congress should be called for the special purpose of enacting legislation to stabilize agricultural conditions and produce prices in the Northwest.

Indian Fair Set For August 29-31

Ft. Yates, N. D., Aug. 8.—Dates for the twelfth annual Standing Rock Indian fair at Fort Yates have recently been set by the Indian office for the 29th, 30th and 31st of August. These dates are earlier than customary and conflict somewhat with the Congressional convention at Cannon Ball. The department at Washington usually arrange for the fair to be held just prior to the opening of school, which begins this year the 3rd of September.

The deceased was an old time business man of Barton and had many friends throughout this part of the state who will regret his sudden death.

LADDIE BOY TOUCHES HEARTS OF ATTENDANTS AT PRESIDENT'S BIER

Washington, Aug. 8.—Laddie Boy, said his last good-bye to his master in the East Room of the White House this morning and there may be some hard hearts who think he couldn't know, but it seemed to those about him as if he did.

Mrs. Harding, who loved Laddie Boy no less than her husband did, told the attendants in whose special charge the pup had been in to take him in the East Room for a moment because he seemed to want to go. Alertly he sniffed the heavy air, freighted with the fragrance of the funeral blooms, walked silently

SOLEMN, BEAUTIFUL TRIBUTE PAID PRESIDENT HARDING AT STATE FUNERAL SERVICE

Long Procession of World's Notables Are Among the Mourners—Mrs. Harding Has Last Minutes Alone With Body in the East Room of the White House—Body Lies in State Remainder of Day

(By the Associated Press.)

Washington, Aug. 8.—A swelling tide of honors bore Warren Harding back over the road which he came, triumphant, to the Presidency two crowded years ago.

For him the earth of ambition was ended, the compelling call of duty stilled in death. Amid the tens of thousands of his silent countrymen grouped along the way he passed in such state as only the great dead of the nation may know and beyond the brief hour of the ceremony there awaited for him rest eternal on the soil that gave him birth.

Down the wide avenue he was carried today with marching legions tramping ahead to lay him under the dome of the capital awhile ere he came back to his native state to stay forever. That high resolve of duty had brought him death and with it peace and quiet he loved, but which he set aside at the nation's call.

With Pershing riding ahead the marching thousands of the escort led the way, the steel of their bayonets glittering above them. Soldiers, sailors, marines and citizen soldiers were there and behind them came the new President still bowed in grief that his office came at such a price. Came also two men who before him had held that office, one to be stricken like himself and so crippled in illness that he might not give himself as he would to the sorrowful duty of the day. Behind this endless array marched the great body of American citizenry and the citizen soldiers, the wheels of a great government moving in the huge silent buildings about.

Military Bands in Line

Military bands interspersed in the columns played old, old hymns that stir and comfort. The hum and dim mystery of last night when the flag-draped casket came to its brief state of quiet in the state chamber was lacking. But there was no sound or movement in the great crowds that lined the way until that fateful burden under its colorful, glorious bunting had been carried by on silent wheels to be lifted to the catafalque in the great stone chamber of the capitol rotunda.

There is something with the simplicity of the man who by dead his funeral service to the state charges a majestic nature. Afterwards in its place of honor beneath the dome the body was to lie until tonight, while thousands upon thousands file past the casket.

As the funeral home approached the casket was opened so that near relatives and friends might have their last look there in the East Room at the blue of their beloved dead who lay with a peaceful smile in the repose of eternity.

Former President Wilson, himself broken by the stress of the chief magistracy, came to the great portico just before the hour of departure to take his place in the cortege at the invitation of President Coolidge. Chief Justice Taft, the only other ex-President, also was waiting when the casket, enshrouded in the Stars and Stripes like that of other soldiers who have made the supreme sacrifice to their country was lifted from its setting of flowers to be borne to its place amid another and perhaps a grander array of floral coloring and fragrance in the rotunda. President Coolidge who entered the White House with a heavy heart, aware of the duty of the highest office in the land, arrived to take his place also just at the hour set for the departure.

As the cortege was forming underneath the shadows of the great trees through which many Presidents have looked out upon the world, sometimes in triumph and many times in sorrow, the bell of St. John's Episcopal church across Lafayette Square known as the church of the Presidents began tolling its doleful lament at the passing of a great heart in the galaxy of immortals.

Mrs. Harding Alone

Only as the procession started did it become known that Mrs. Harding had been with the body in the East Room for half an hour at 1 o'clock this morning. She was alone at times and at other times attended by one or two relatives. But while the officials were gathered at the funeral hour to take up their places in the cortege she remained in her room alone with her grief.

Before the casket, as it was carried down the steps, she asked the two ministers elected to officiate later at the funeral in the rotunda. They walked side by side, Doctor A. Freeman Anderson, pastor of Mr. Harding's church here, and Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the house of representatives. Then came the military and naval aides who had been near to the President at all the dramatic moments of his brief, full service as the first leader of his people.

In Pennsylvania avenue the long silence that hitherto had been disturbed only by the chanting of the restless mounts of the troopers was broken by the strains of Chopin's funeral march, played by an army band. There was only a brief delay, then until the last journey of Warren Harding along the historic thoroughfare had begun between the dense crowds of humanity that made a long aisle of grief from the very gates of the executive mansion to the towering capitol a mile away.

At the same time a bugler came to the portico and sounded shrilly the single note of the soldier's call to attention. The cavalry opposite on the avenue came to a sharp salute with their blades flashing in the sunlight. Then there was a drumming of drums just as the guns of Fort Mifflin across the silent Potomac answered the echoes with a salute to the departed comrade.

Leave White House

Mrs. Harding came down the steps a moment later heavily veiled, her frail form making a pitiful picture amid the splendor and pomp of the great honors to which, by a full measure of devotion, she had helped and inspired, her husband to achieve. On one side of her walked Secretary (Continued on Page Three) around the great crystal chandelier and looked his eyes in the flowers as if looking for the master he knew was there but could not see and then turned brown eyes on the White House attaches with an inquiring look which was too much for them to endure without their own eyes turning misty.

Laddie Boy knew his master was back in the house but he seemed to sense that for some reason he couldn't see him and like a good dog he concluded there was nothing to do but go back to his favorite spot and wait, faithful to the end.

NEWSPAPER ELECTION ACT IS DISCUSSED

Supreme Court Says Legislature Did Not Contemplate Bringing Them In It

Because it held that the case before it was not properly an equitable action the supreme court did not find it necessary to decide one of the strongly contested points in the controversy between the Ransom County Farmers Press and the Lisbon Free Press over the selection of the latter as official paper of Ransom county, but the court in its discussion of the case strongly intimates, according to interpretations placed here, that the corrupt practices act of 1911 does not apply to an election in which the candidates are candidates at the same as other candidates.

The plaintiff and appellant had contended the Lisbon Free Press had violated the corrupt practices in offering to furnish a copy of its paper containing the delinquent tax list.

"The Corrupt Practices Act (chapter 129, laws 1911; sections 923-944, C. L. 1913) applies to all primary and general elections held in the state; but the language of the act indicates that the legislature intended that certain provisions should be applicable only to elections of public officers, while other provisions should be applicable alike to election of officers and elections involving some measure, proposition or question submitted to an election," says the syllabus of the decision, which was issued per curiam, or by all judges.

Adopted in 1911
"The Corrupt Practices Act was adopted in 1911. (Chapter 129, Laws 1911; Sections 923-925 C. L. 1913), says the opinion. "At the time of its enactment there was no provision for the selection of official newspapers at an election."

The legislative assembly which enacted the Corrupt Practices Act, also, enacted a law imposing upon the county commissioners of each county in the state the duty to designate the official newspaper of the county. (Chapter 187, Laws 1911). The law providing for the selection of an official newspaper was enacted in 1919. (Chapter 187, Laws 1919). Hence, it is manifest that at the time the Corrupt Practices Act was enacted, the legislature had no intention that it should apply to an election held for the purpose of selecting an official newspaper."

MAKES ATTACK ON INDIANA'S EXTRADITION

E. R. Sinkler, Minot Attorney, Opposes Request to Send Jourgien Olson Back

HEARING IS HELD HERE

Matter Continued From Time to Time Because of Attempt For Settlement

Vigorous resistance to Indiana's request for the extradition of Jourgien Olson of Minot to face charges preferred as a result of the failure of the Farmers Bank of Newburgh, Ind., in which Olson was a stockholder, was voiced before Governor Nestos today by E. R. Sinkler, Olson's attorney.

To give Indiana attorneys here time to prepare answers to Sinkler's objections the hearing was adjourned until Saturday morning.

Sinkler asserted that "Indiana is attempting to collect a debt which we admit is a just debt, but North Dakota should not send Jourgien Olson back to Indiana to be coerced into a settlement."

Declaring that under the laws of Indiana all stockholders were liable for the full amount of the bank's losses, Sinkler declared that the depositors in the failed Indiana bank would not lose.

The hearing opened yesterday afternoon but was adjourned with little action, because the previous request of the Governor of Indiana for Olson's extradition, issued some months ago, was revoked and new charges and a new warrant presented.

Hearing on the original request for extradition was continued from time to time on the request of the Governor of Indiana, Sinkler said, because an attempt was made to effect a settlement in the liabilities growing out of the Indiana bank failure. He said Olson signed an agreement under which he would give as security about 2,000 acres of North Dakota land, but the agreement was not consummated and the settlement was prevented by one or two attorneys in the matter.

Wants to Settle
"I believe the Governor of Indiana exercised good judgment in delaying the matter," said Sinkler, "and I believe it would be good judgment to continue it further, and a settlement may yet be effected."

He admitted Olson was civilly liable but denied that he was criminally liable.

Sinkler also attacked the three counts against Olson, raising numerous technical objections. The counts charged conspiracy to obtain money under false pretenses, obtaining money under false pretenses and grand larceny. He alleged that with respect to the first two charges the statute of limitations has expired, the offense complained of, he said, being charged as of November 1, 1917.

Sinkler asserted that the charge made in one count that Olson absconded from Indiana on October 11, 1921, was false because Olson was in Minot during that time while Sinkler and Attorney Pauls of Minot were in Indiana trying to straighten out the bank affairs. With respect to Arthur Halvorson and John C. Emfinger, charged jointly with Sinkler, the latter asserted Emfinger was now in Indiana.

Three Representatives Here
The state of Indiana is represented here by Fred J. Whicker of the state banking department, H. A. Appus, prosecuting attorney, H. W. Warlick, county, and Judge Thomas W. Lindsey of Evansville, assisting the state.

The affidavit on which the extradition of Olson was asked was in the hands of the state when Sinkler, the suitor, was asked to produce money under false pretenses, obtaining money under false pretenses and grand larceny.

"It is charged that Olson obtained $113,800.00 from the Farmers Bank of Newburgh, Indiana," said Judge Lindsey. "It is alleged that he and associates represented to the people of the community that the stockholders were worth more than a million dollars and that every dollar deposited in the bank was backed by them. It is charged by the state that he withdrew money from the bank and placed it in worthless paper, such as stock in North Dakota corporations of his, mortgages and lands of none or little value."

Prosecuting Attorney Bippus added that two suicides had grown out of the failure of the bank in Indiana, the suicides being members of the board of directors of the bank whom he alleged were innocent of the transactions.

Request Revoked
At the opening of the hearing yesterday afternoon Prosecuting Attorney Bippus announced that the request on which Governor McCray county, Indiana, asked extradition of Olson had been revoked, and presented new affidavits and requisition of the Indiana executive.

The indictments on which the first extradition was asked were quashed by the circuit court of Vanderburgh county, Indiana, to which the matter had been sent on change of venue, he said.

E. R. Sinkler, Minot attorney, representing Olson, was taken by surprise by the presenting of new charges. (Continued on Page Three)

GERMANS ALSO SPURN BRITISH DEBT PROPOSAL

Chancellor Cuno in Speech Says That Conditions Are Unpleasant

SITUATION IS SERIOUS

Greatest Confusion Obtains in the Retail Markets Throughout Berlin

Berlin, Aug. 8.—Chancellor Cuno in his promised speech in the Reichstag on the reparations situation today dealt particularly with the proposals for a settlement recently advanced by Great Britain.

The chancellor said the principles on which Great Britain had based her proposals were unpleasant to Germany.

GREAT CONFUSION

Berlin, Aug. 8.—(By the Associated Press)—Utter confusion prevailed in the retail situation in all lines in Greater Berlin yesterday due to the continued plunging of the mark and the consequent fantastic rise of the dollar.

While the food situation continued to show a chronic shortage in ordinary staples, hourly rises of prices caused by the fluctuation of the mark are projecting a new and serious element into the situation, as the retailers are withdrawing their wares from sale whenever the customers refuse to pay prices based on the gold mark or the dollar units.

Shopkeepers Proclaim Strike
As the latter procedure results in the price ranges which are prohibited under the usury ordinance, the shopkeepers' union has proclaimed general strike for Thursday and all retail establishments except food stores will close for a day as a protest against conditions under which they are expected to operate.

Their chief objection is being directed against the prohibition of price quotations based on the gold unit.

Many shops throughout the city already have shut down, barricading their doors and emptying the shop windows of all display.

Meanwhile, the government is making hectic efforts to prevent the situation from lapsing into a state of unredeemable chaos and is hastening a program of tax and financial measures.

The dollar rate fluctuated between three and four million marks to the dollar throughout the day.

GOVERNOR FOR CALLING OF U. S. CONGRESS

Governor R. A. Nestos has written to President Calvin Coolidge calling attention to a letter he addressed to President Harding late in July and reiterating and re-emphasizing his belief that a special session of Congress should be called for the special purpose of enacting legislation to stabilize agricultural conditions and produce prices in the Northwest.

Indian Fair Set For August 29-31

St. Yates, N. D., Aug. 8.—Dates for the twelfth annual Standing Rock Indian fair at Fort Yates have recently been set by the Indian office for the 29th, 30th and 31st of August. These dates are earlier than customary and conflict somewhat with the Congressional convention at Cannon Ball. The department at Washington usually arrange for the fair to be held just prior to the opening of school, which begins this year the 3rd of September.

The deceased was an old time business man of Barton and had many friends throughout this part of the state who will regret his sudden death.

LADDIE BOY TOUCHES HEARTS OF ATTENDANTS AT PRESIDENT'S BIER

Washington, Aug. 8.—Laddie Boy said his last good-bye to his master in the East Room of the White House this morning and there may be some hard hearts who think he couldn't know, but it seemed to those about him as if he did.

Mrs. Harding, who loved Laddie Boy no less than her husband did, told the attendants in whose special charge the pup has been in to take him in the East Room for a moment because he seemed to want to go. Alas, he sniffed the heavy air, freighted with the fragrance of the funeral blooms, walked silently

Long Procession of World's Notables Are Among the Mourners—Mrs. Harding Has Last Minutes Alone With Body in the East Room of the White House—Body Lies in State Remainder of Day

(By the Associated Press.)

Washington, Aug. 8.—A swelling tide of honors bore Warren Harding back over the road which he came, triumphant, to the Presidency two crowded years ago.

For him the earth of ambition was ended, the compelling call of duty stilled in death. Amid the tens of thousands of his silent countrymen grouped along the way he passed in such state as only the great dead of the nation may know and beyond the brief hour of the ceremony there awaited for him rest eternal on the soil that gave him birth.

Down the wide avenue he was carried today with marching legions tramping ahead to lay him under the dome of the capitol while are he goes back to his native state to stay forever. That high resolve of duty had brought him death and with it peace and quiet he loved, but which he set aside at the nation's call.

With Pershing riding ahead the marching thousands of the escort led him like himself and so crippled himself as he would to the sorrowful duty of the day. Behind this endless array marched the great body of American citizenry and the men who keep the wheels of a great government moving in the huge silent buildings about.

Military Bands in Line
Military bands interspersed in the columns played old, old hymns that stir and comfort. The hum and dim mystery of last night when the flag-draped casket came to its brief state of quiet in the White House was lacking. But there was no sound or movement in the great crowds that lined the way until that fateful burden under its colorful, glorious bunting had been carried by on silent wheels to be lifted to the catafalque in the great stone chamber of the capitol rotunda.

There is keeping with the simplicity of the man who lay dead the funeral services were of brief, impressive nature. Afterwards in its place of honor beneath the dome the body was to lie until tonight, while thousands upon thousands file past the casket.

As the funeral hour approached the casket was opened so that near relatives and friends might have their last look there in the East Room at the bier of their beloved dead who lay with a peaceful smile in the repose of eternity.

Former President Wilson, himself broken by the cares of the chief magistracy, came to the great portico just before the hour of departure to take his place in the cortege at the invitation of President Coolidge.

Chief Justice Taft, the only other ex-President, also was waiting when the casket, enshrouded in the Stars and Stripes like that of other soldiers who have made the supreme sacrifice to their country was lifted from its setting of flowers to be borne to its place amid another and perhaps a grander array of floral coloring and fragrances which the President Coolidge who entered the White House with heavy heart upon the duty of the highest office in the land, arrived to take his place also just at the hour set for the departure.

As the cortege was forming under the shadows of the great trees through which many Presidents have looked out upon the world, sometimes in triumph and sometimes in sorrow, the bell of St. John's Episcopal church across Lafayette Square known as the church of the Presidents began tolling its doleful lament at the passing of a great heart in the galaxy of immortals.

ROOSTER CASE KILLING ENDS BEFORE JURY

Man Who Shot and Killed Neighbor Is Found Guilty in South Dakota

Sioux Falls, S. D., Aug. 8.—After deliberating 15 minutes and taking 100 ballots the jury in the trial of Carl L. Bergeson in circuit court last night returned a verdict of not guilty to the state charge of murder of Eugene Griffin, who was shot and killed in Bergeson's yard 22 days ago.

Griffin was found by Bergeson in the latter's chicken coop, according to Griffin Bergeson then fired two shots at Griffin, the man dying almost immediately. It was supposed that Griffin had entered the coop for the purpose of killing a rooster which annoyed him by its crowing.

Before the casket, as it was carried down the steps, walked the two ministers selected to officiate later at the funeral in the rotunda. They walked side by side, Doctor A. Freeman Anderson, pastor of Mr. Harding's church here, and Dr. James B. Montgomery, chaplain of the house of representatives. Then came the military and naval aides who had been near to the President at all the dramatic moments of his brief, full service as the first leader of his people.

In Pennsylvania avenue the long silence that hitherto had been disturbed only by the chanting of the restless mounts of the troopers was broken by the strains of Chopin's funeral march, played by an army band. There was only a brief delay, then until the last journey of Warren Harding along the historic thoroughfare had begun between the dense crowds of humanity that made a long aisle of grief from the very gates of the executive mansion to the towering capitol a mile away.

At the same time a bugler came to the portico and sounded shrilly the single note of the soldier's call to attention. The cavalry opposite on the avenue came to a sharp salute with their blades flashing in the sunlight. Then there was a flourish of the drums just as the guns of Fort Myer across the silent Potomac awoke the echoes with a salute to the departed comrade.

Leave White House
Mrs. Harding came down the steps a moment later heavily veiled, her frail form making a pitiful picture amid the splendor and pomp of the great honors to which, by a full measure of devotion, she had helped and inspired, her husband to achieve. On one side of her walked Secretary (Continued on Page Three)

Laddie Boy knew his master was back in the house but he seemed to sense that for some reason he couldn't see him and like a good dog he concluded there was nothing to do but go back to his favorite spot and wait, faithful to the end.

START POURING CONCRETE FOR WATER WORKS

Excavation for Filtration Plant Being Put in by City Virtually Finished

PIPE LAYING HELD UP

Lack of Pipe Causes Temporary Suspension of Laying 16-Inch Main

Pouring of concrete on the walls of the sedimentation basin of the city water works filtration plant began today, but work of laying the new big 16-inch main to the city is suspended because of lack of material.

Excavation for the filtration plant is all virtually complete and work on the building will go ahead rapidly, with the pouring of concrete. It is hoped to have the building enclosed by cold weather so that installation of machinery can go right ahead.

Failure of the American Cast Iron Pipe company to ship services to go on the 16-inch pipe has caused suspension of that work. The deep trench in which this main is laid is now complete from near the river to part way across the Country Club grounds, and a machine is setting on Avenue C to carry it on down to the heart of the city. The pipe now in the ground will not be covered until a test is made of it, T. R. Atkinson, city engineer, informed the city commission last night.

The city engineer also reported that as compensation for right-of-way across his land J. J. Jackson had suggested that the city lay a new three-fourths inch pipe to his house. The cost was estimated at probably $300. The city engineer thought this proposition was reasonable. Action probably will be taken Thursday night.

Whether the reservoirs of the Bismarck Water Supply Company will be cleaned before the city takes over the plant is in question. A representative of the commission last night said that inasmuch as the city will take over the plant soon it had been suggested by the company attorney that the company and city divide the expense of cleaning the reservoirs. He said that while it was customary to clean them after the June rise the water had remained so high and turbid that it would have been useless to do so, and only within the last few days has the water gone down enough to make it feasible to clean them. He reported word was awaited from Judge Flannery, president of the company. The matter was held in abeyance until Thursday night, it being expected that word will have been received from Judge Flannery by that time.

Adjourn Meeting

The commission adjourned its meeting until Thursday so that it could take action in the event of an unfavorable decision of the supreme court in the city water works bond issue case. Should the decision be unfavorable a special election would be called so that the city could still carry out its contract to take over the water works, it having agreed to do this by September 9.

Question of allowance of estimates of contractors for work already done was discussed briefly but no action taken. The city has not as yet received funds from warrants or bonds to be used in paying contractors.

PAVING BIDS ARE RECEIVED

Norton County Board of Commissioners to Let Contract

Bids were received yesterday afternoon by the county commissioners of Norton county and by the city commission of Mandan last night for paving of Main street in Mandan to the city limits and on through the new overpass at the Northern Pacific main line and north line junction east of Mandan.

The county board was meeting again this afternoon and was expected to act upon the bids, awarding a contract.

C. F. Kelsch, city attorney, and E. R. Griffin, city engineer, of Mandan, had ruled that protests against the city's proposed paving, which included Main street east and some cross streets, lacked sufficient signatures to be effective.

There were seven bidders on concrete and asphaltic concrete 18-foot roadways.

The bids, according to State Engineer Black, were fairly low.

London to Foster Technical Training

London, Aug. 7.—Two-thirds of the boys reared in London enter casual trades, as unskilled labor and shopmen, and only 18 per cent of them enter the skilled trades.

These figures, which have been prepared in the interests of a campaign to furnish greater technical education for London's youth, are said to be higher in unskilled and lower in skilled trades than are other large cities in western Europe or America.

This is the result of insufficient technical training centers, and the poverty among the lower classes, which forces the boys to work at very early ages.

The campaign which is being backed by many welfare organizations will attempt to arouse interest in the establishing of training centers throughout England.

The city covers three-fourths of the earth's surface, or a total area of about 145 million square miles.

HE'S GOT 600 ELEPHANTS BUT WANTS STILL MORE

HERB SCHOENFELD AND HIS ELEPHANTS.

By NEA Service

Seattle, Aug. 7.—Herbert Schoenfeld, Seattle business man, has a white elephant on his hands—and several hundred more of various types, sizes and colors.

When it comes to elephants, Schoenfeld is a "friend." He cheerfully admits it. He has an over-powering penchant for hand-carved pachyderms of all breed.

Schoenfeld's collection now numbers some 600 specimens and is growing. He has been gathering them in from the far corners of the world for 15 years and his business office, where he houses his pets, looks like an elephantine menagerie.

"I have always liked elephants," explains Schoenfeld. "I have always been interested in reading about their symbolism—their expression, in the eyes of orientals, with good luck, friendship and strength. Fifteen years ago I was in Japan where elephant bronzes were numerous. The opportunity was there and I started my collection."

The Schoenfeld "herd" now includes artistic creations in bronze, marble, porcelain, mahogany, native woods of European and tropical forests, coral and sponge. The largest of the group measures four feet from tail to trunk and is 23 inches high.

It is of bronze, and came originally from Honolulu. An elephant carved from pink coral is the smallest one, a miniature of about one-half by one-fourth inch.

When Schoenfeld's friends go strolling in distant places, they send him more elephants.

"And some days," he says, "I hope to get a live one."

A public invitation is extended; it is announced, and in addition to Gov. E. A. Nestos, special invitations have been extended to Frank Murphy of Wheaton, Minn., leader of a similar movement in that state and to Senator Johnson of Minnesota.

"It is hoped that all of Northwestern North Dakota will have representatives here and that all who can will avail themselves of this opportunity of the work being done, the plan proposed, and the possibilities of success," Mr. Halvorson said today.

Amusement Houses Close Friday

New York, Aug. 7.—Steps were taken today to have all motion picture houses, vaudeville, and other places of amusement remain closed Friday, the day of the funeral in Marion, Ohio, of President Harding.

LIQUIDATION OF BANKS IN STATE BETTER

Deposits Shown to Have Increased Over Same Period For Year Ago

GENERALLY HEALTHY

Surplus Reserve Over Legal Requirements Is Shown in Banks as a Whole

State banks of North Dakota as a whole show a continued healthy condition in the abstract of reports made on call of the state bank examiner as of close of business on June 30, 1923, according to figures made public today.

The amount of bills payable of the 643 state banks and four trust companies reporting was $18,130,843.29 on June 30, 1923, as compared to $23,720,185.81 on June 30, 1922, a decrease of $7,589,342.52 being shown in one year, an unusually heavy liquidation. Between April 3, 1923, and June 30, 1923 the bills payable decreased $68,167.09, showing a liquidation during a usually heavy borrowing period.

Deposits of the banks and trust companies also on June 30, 1923 stood $4,000,000 above the figure on the same date a year previous. Total deposits on June 30, 1923, were $31,467,408.28. A decrease was shown between April 30 and June 30, 1923, this being expected at this time of year.

The total reserve of the state banks also is shown to be higher than required by law. Surplus reserve on June 30, 1923 amounted to $2,567,020.54. Total reserve on June 30, 1923 was $9,820,805.66 as compared to $9,110,010.70 a year previous.

Savings deposits show an increase for all comparative periods. The deposits of this class totalled $2,970,467.15 on June 30, 1923, as compared to $2,268,228.07 on June 30, 1922 and $2,946,589.91 on April 3, 1923.

The number of banks reporting on June 30, 1923, was 17 less than on June 30, 1922.

NORMA SCORES IN NEW ROLE

"Within The Law," Shown at Eltinge Theater, Is Dramatic Triumph For Her

Norma Talmadge has given the screen one of the most gripping dramas of a decade in her pictureization of "Within The Law," the first National picture which opened at the Eltinge theater yesterday. It will be shown again today and Wednesday, with matinee and evening performances.

"Within The Law" enjoys the reputation of being the most successful stage drama ever produced. If present indications are any criterion, it will be an even greater success on the silver screen, for as a moving picture it is more moving entertainment.

Jack Mulhall gives his finest screen performance as Dick Gilder, while Ellen Petry, as Aggie Lynch, the blackmailer, contributes a characterization that is particularly vivid.

Three members of the cast who were in the original company of "Within The Law," which was produced in 1912, again distinguish themselves. DeWitt Jennings, whose portrayal of Inspector Burke on the stage was one of the bright spots of Broadway premiere, again essays the same part with equal success. Many called at the hotel suite occupied by Mr. Coolidge simply to pay their respects. Chairman Hammond of the federal coal commission and President Campers of the American Federation of Labor, however, discussed various phases of the coal situation with the new executive. In neither conference, it was said, was the possibility of a strike in the anthracite field discussed. The agricultural situation was taken up with Fred W. ASTROLOGIST WHO PREDICTED NOMINATION OF HARDING ALSO FORETOLD HE WOULD DIE

Fate Ran True to Prophecy in The Life and Death of Warren G. Harding—Prophecy At Time of Nomination Is Recalled.

BY HARRY B. HUNT
NEA Service Writer
Washington, Aug. 6.—Fate ran true to prophecy in the life and death of Warren G. Harding. Probably no more striking instance of the influence of the stars on human affairs, as preached by occultists and astrologists, ever was known than that in which, months before his nomination, Harding was picked as the next president by a Washington astrologist, Madam Marcia, who at the time predicted that he would live out only a little more than half his term.

"The end," she said in making this prediction in February 1920, "when it comes will be sudden, after an illness of short duration."

I went to see this astrologist with whose former predictions I was familiar, on Tuesday, July 31, when President Harding lay ill in San Francisco. The bulletins from the bedside at the time I called announced the patient was improving. He was on the highway to recovery, the attending physicians agreed.

But Madam Marcia, who had spent the morning pouring over the horoscope of the ill man, shook her head.

MADAM MARCIA

Predicts Harding's Death
"It is the end," she said. "He will never recover. The crisis will come Thursday night. He will be dead Friday."

In the face of the doctor's bulletins, I smiled at her. But she was immovable, steadfast in her tragic forecast. "He can not recover," she persisted. "He will be dead by Friday."

Believers in fate will find in Madam Marcia's readings of what life held for Harding seeming proof to sustain their faith in the governing power of the stars.

Back in February, 1920, four women—all unknown to the astrologist, called on Madam Marcia.

"We want our horoscopes read," they said. "We want to know which of us is to be the next first lady of the land."

The charts were drawn and Madam proceeded to the study of what they foretold. Half way through the reading she pointed to Mrs. Harding and said:

"If any of you ladies are to be the first lady this is the one."

Some time later the woman who had been selected as the future first lady, whose identity was still unknown to Madam Marcia, called again.

"I want you to read this horoscope," she said, giving a birth date of Nov. 2, 1865, at 8 a. m.

Foretold Election and Death
"This person," Madam Marcia told her, in the course of the reading, "will be the next president of the United States. But he will not live out his term. He will die a sudden if not violent death."

In order to identify this horoscope, it was marked with the initials, "F. K. H." given by the still unknown caller.

On May 20, 1920, this woman called again on Madam Marcia. The madam could no longer restrain her curiosity.

"I can not figure it out," she said. "This person will be the next president, but I can find no presidential possibility with initials F. K. H. I can not understand it."

"I didn't say those were the initials of the person whose horoscope that is," Mrs. Harding replied. "They are my initials." She then disclosed her identity.

"I have come to you for advice," she continued. "Mr. Harding is under tremendous pressure from the highest party leaders to withdraw as a candidate. What should he do?"

"He must stick," Madam Marcia said. "He will not be nominated until after noon on Saturday of the convention. But he will be nominated."

Blocks Harding's Withdrawal
At 10 minutes of 12 on Saturday, during the convention at Chicago, the nomination seemed deadlocked. Harding sent a note to Mrs. Harding, who was seated in the auditorium with Mrs. Harry C. Woodard, wife of the congressman from West Virginia.

"Florence, the note read, 'why do you not want me to withdraw when you do not want me to have it?'"

"Stay until after 12 o'clock and I'll tell you," Mrs. Harding wrote back.

On the next ballot the deadlock broke. At 10 minutes after 12 Warren G. Harding had been nominated.

Mrs. Woodard, who was with Mrs. Harding at the convention, was the woman who first took her to visit Madam Marcia. The other two of the party of four were Mrs. Poinsett and Mrs. Sutherland, both wives of senators who had presidential aspirations. The visit, made in jest after a fulfilled afternoon at their white club, following Harding's nomination and election became a mighty serious matter to them.

"For it raised a new question whether man is or is not after all a thing of destiny, an instrument in the hands of fate, simply playing his part in a role cast for him by the immutables."

Cool weather prevails in all sections. North Dakota Corn and Wheat Region Summary

For the week ending Aug. 7, 1923. Black stem rust seriously damaged spring wheat in all sections, especially in the west and central portions where delay was experienced in spring seeding. Much spring wheat has been cut and harvested, being rushed to avoid serious rust damage. Rye is practically all cut and mostly threshed. Corn is maturing rapidly and is generally good to excellent. The flax harvest is general, but there is much pigeon grass in the late crop. Indications are for a good yield of early flax. The second crop of alfalfa is being cut. Millet and wild rye is also being cut. Pastures generally need rain.

WILL OBSERVE CENTENNIAL OF U. S. RAILROAD

American Railway Association Begin Work on Celebration Plans

PASS RESOLUTIONS

Will Show How Railway Transportation Has Developed

Chicago, Aug. 8.—Plans to celebrate the centennial of the American railroad here with an exhibition showing its evolution and effect on the nation's growth have been begun by the American Railway Association. Committees have been appointed to gather data as to an appropriate date for the celebration, and to determine the extent of the miniature world's fair which is being considered in this connection.

Three railway organizations have adopted resolutions urging the appropriate observation of a hundred years of railroad development—American Railway Engineering Association, American Railway Development Association and the Mechanical Division of the American Railway Association.

As no city has a convention hall large enough to hold all the exhibits, according to V. R. Hawthorne, secretary of Division 5, American Railway Association, he proposes the erection of a temporary structure to accommodate the 25 or more exhibits which would hold conventions under the plans. Another suggestion is to hold a central exposition in Chicago with a number of smaller celebrations held simultaneously in other cities, making Chicago the center of a great railroad centennial wheel.

American railroads will participate in 1925 in the English celebration of the opening of the first railway in the world, conducted by the International Railway Congress, but it is the desire of the American Railway Association also to commemorate the American centennial, which comes in 1928.

The trackage of the American roads, according to the Interstate Commerce Commission, is 376,992 miles, not including switches and terminal lines. According to these same figures, there are now in operation approximately 70,000 locomotives, 2,500,000 freight cars and 65,000 passenger cars.

"Although there were railways in the United States prior to 1825, they were not common carriers," says the Chicago Association of Commerce, interested in the plans for commemoration. "When Charles Carroll of Carrollton, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, drove the first stage at Elkton's Mills, Md., for the first seven miles of railway between Vinegar Hill and Baltimore, he helped to establish the Baltimore and Ohio, which began operating trains in 1830."

In 1825, Horatio Allen went to England and contracted for four steam locomotives to be built by George Stephenson. "America" was the first steam locomotive to be seen in the western hemisphere. It was placed on blocks at New York in January, 1829, and was exhibited to an awe-struck public for three months.

"But the 'Stourbridge Lion' was the first locomotive actually to run on metal rails. It was used by the Delaware & Hudson, which at that time was primarily a canal company."

The railroad centennial will show how railway transportation has made possible the development of the United States, according to Mr. Hawthorne. Starting with less than 100 years ago, he said, railway transportation has reached a point where an estimated expenditure of $1,540,000,000 is necessary this year to provide the railroad facilities to enable the general business of the country to proceed without interruption.

NEW STARS TO APPEAR IN OPERA

Fernand Anseau of France Will Make Debut With Chicago Civic Opera

INCLUDES MANY OTHERS

Chicago, Aug. 8.—Fernand Anseau, leading tenor in French opera, will make his American debut with the Chicago Civic Opera, which opens here November 8, according to the announcement made by the company. Arrangements are being made for the appearance of other brilliant guest artists, which will include Mme. Louise Homer. She will appear in a limited number of performances including "Samson and Delilah."

Other stars included in the regular personnel of the company for the coming season will be Mary Garden, Amelita Galli Curci, Florene MacBeth, Mary McCormic, Cyrena Van Gordon, Georges Baklanoff, Tito Schipa, Edith Mason and Feodor Chaliapin, with Giorgio Polacco again present as musical director.

"Boris Godunoff" and "L'Africain," the latter by Meyerbeer, are announced as novelties in the 1923-24 season, because they never before have been given by the Civic Opera Company. The role of Boris is said by estimate to be one of Chaliapin's greatest. Among the revivals announced is that of "Zaza," with Mary Garden in the title role. Miss Garden also will appear in the revival of Massenet's "Cleopatra."

Harry W. Beatty, technical director, is spending the summer in Europe visiting the more famous opera houses of France, Germany and Italy in search of new ideas. He is said to be making a special study of proposed settings in Moussorgsky's "Boris Godunoff," which has become popular with American audiences.

The opening of the operatic season November 8 is a departure from custom, as the season will open Thursday instead of the usual Monday and will run one and one-half weeks longer than the usual season of ten weeks.

Announcement also was made that Adolph Bohm will be in charge of the ballet and that Miss Anna Ludmilla would return as premiere danseuse.

USED MAILS TO DEFRAUD

Arraign Revivalist and Banker in Wisconsin Courts

Madison, Wis., Aug. 8.—Victory H. Arnold, banker and revivalist of this city was arraigned in the Federal court at Superior, Wis., August 7 to answer to an indictment charging him with using the mails to defraud. Arnold was president of the now bankrupt Madison Bond company and gained wide comment by his religious revival meetings in New York City and Madison before the United States government began investigating his alleged bond selling work in Wisconsin.

The Federal Grand Jury, meeting here last December, returned a complaint against Arnold which pointed to transactions in which investors were found to have lost nearly $800,000. Residents of southern Wisconsin are largely concerned.

While those responsible for the complaints leading to the indictment claim that Mr. Arnold unlawfully ac-

Fred Schoender chased it for some distance, the deer bounding along, easily keeping ahead of its pursuer, and while it appeared timid it seemed to be much at home in grain and cornfields. It finally entered an exceptionally large cornfield and no further trace of it could be found.

It was supposed to be the same animal that was seen near Harwood, N. D., some weeks ago.

An instructive book has been published by Dr. A. S. McCleary, the noted rectal specialist of Kansas City. This book tells how sufferers from Piles can be quickly and easily cured without the use of knife, scissors, "hot" iron, electricity or any other cutting or burning method, without confinement to bed and no hospital bills to pay. The method has been a success for twenty-four years and in more than eight thousand cases. RIFLE SHOT DRAWS FAMOUS AMERICAN GUNS

Success of 1923 Grand Trap-shoot Guaranteed, Says Mathews

HELD AUGUST 20-25

Compete For Eleven Amateur Championships During Tournament

Chicago, Aug. 8.—Enough entries already have been received to guarantee the success of the North American Trapshooting Championships of 1923, according to an announcement by Secretary Starr Mathews, of the Amateur Trapshooting Association of America. The Grand American Handicap, which will be contested in this city, August 20-25, will be the first ever held under amateur control.

Entries close August 11, and it is predicted that the high-water mark for Grand American attendance will be reached by that date. This estimate is based on the large number of entries already received by Mr. Mathews. The Grand American Handicap is the most widely known event on the week's program.

There are eleven amateur championships to be competed for during the tournament. These include the doubles championship, featured the second day, the junior championship and the zone team championship. The zone team championship is scheduled for the third day; the five-class championships on the fourth day, and the All-Round Championship, which is completed on the 1,000 targets which make up the week's program.

The present title holders are: Singles—Dave Fauske, Worthington, Minn.

Doubles—R. A. King, Wichita Falls, Texas.

Women's—Mrs. E. L. King, Winona, Minn.

Junior—Dudley Shallcross, Seekonk, Mass.

All-Round—Phil R. Miller, Dallas, Texas.

Zone Team—P. R. Miller, Frank Hughes, E. C. Wheeler, R. A. King, and C. A. Gunning of the Prairie Zone.

Class A—P. R. Miller, Dallas, Tex.

Class B—George Gray, Philadelphia, Pa.

Class C—C. B. Chapman, Clarkburg, W. Va.

Class D—H. L. Thompson, Savannah, Ga.

Class E—P. G. Fletcher, Richmond, Va.

The Grand American Handicap has never been won from the 23-yard mark, but Jack Frink, of Worthington, Minn., won it last year from the 22-yard mark. In front of him were some clever marksmen and when all had completed the 100 targets Frink and four others were tied with the score of 96. Only two other men—H. O. Heikes and Wolfolk Henderson—were successful in winning the handicap from the same yard mark.

The former won in 1900 with a score of 91 and the latter broke 98 in 1914.

Former Grand American winners are:

NEW SONGS ARE FEATURE OF CONCERT

Men Show Excellent Dramatic Ability in Portrayal of Selections

Something new in song features and clever dramatic work appeared in the program of the Men's Glee club of North-Western College, Naperville, Ill., last night at the Auditorium. A well lighted house witnessed the entertainment.

Probably the take off on a German band and the imitation of the "Missouri Nightingale" proved the most delightful to the audience, for they were something new. The acrobatics of the leader of the German band were excellent while the cooperation of the "drums" with that of the band brought forth roars of mirth from the audience. Some of the take-offs on old and much loved songs of the American public completed the humorous side of the program while a number of classic and semi-classic numbers broadened the program and made it adaptable to the various tastes of the audience.

The chorus work of the young men was excellent while Mr. Pinney as an accompanist did his part to put the various selections across in their best style.

The violin solo by John C. Trollman was an excellent number as were the band selections which came as a surprise to the audience. Alvin C. Zurich proved himself a pleasing accompanist by reading first a pathetic selection followed with a couple of humorous encores. All the numbers were encores, but the entertainers responded to only a part of those demanded by the audience.

Out of respect to the memory of Warren G. Harding the Glee club sang the late President's favorite song, "Lead Kindly Light" while the audience stood with bowed heads. The singing of "Johnnie Schmorger," a feature of the Glee Club of North-Western college for the past twenty-five years brought forth repeated applause. While attempts have been made to eliminate this number from the program, no success has ever been made, because the people who have heard the Glee club always demand it. George Schmorger, who died, had died his part excellently.

For the past three weeks the young men have been touring the western states. Just recently they appeared at the Greek Amphitheatre at Berkeley, Calif., before an audience of 2,000. A total of 136 tickets to the concert were sold, bringing a total of $401. After the expenses of bringing the company here are paid the remainder of the funds will be used to pay for the large instruments in the Juvenile Band.

MANDAN ROAD BIDS HELD UP UNTIL AUG. 15

Must Await Action Upon Protests Against Paving of Streets and Road

Seven bidders presented figures to the county commissioners on the paving of the three quarters of a mile from the east end of the road beyond the Northern Pacific underpass and street paving at the meeting of the Morton County Commissioners Monday evening.

No contract will be let before August 15, it was said today, because protests had been filed and under the law it is necessary to postpone the award of a contract until the 15th.

The bidding by the contractors for concrete paving was as follows: Schurth-Welch Co., Minneapolis concrete $175,291.30; asphaltic $185,130.30; S. Burch and Sons, Fargo, concrete $168,137.30; bitulithic $171,017.30; W. E. Kennedy, Fargo concrete, $166,744.10; Miller Hutchinson Co., La. Moore, $160,044.50; Hagart Const. Co., Fargo concrete $168,273.45; bitulithic $171,873.45; Woodrich Const. Co., Minneapolis, concrete $157,211.30; McIntire-Blakesley, Great Falls, concrete $178,645.50.

The bids on the paving show Woodrich Construction company as low on concrete which the majority of the city commissioners appear to favor. The bids were the lowest opened by the contractors.

Wednesday, Aug. 15 has been set by the city commissioners as the date for final action on the paving.

The bids received by the county commissioners on the section of the Mandan-Bismarck highway which it is proposed to pave this fall from the city limits to the highway bridge, beneath the tracks were slightly lower due to the smaller amount of work. While bids have not been tabulated it was thought that Miller-Hutchinson were the lowest bidders with Woodrich Construction company second.

Wednesday, Aug. 15 has been set by the city commissioners as the date for final action on the paving.

The bids received by the county commissioners on the section of the Mandan-Bismarck highway which it is proposed to pave this fall from the city limits to the highway bridge, beneath the tracks were slightly lower due to the smaller amount of work. While bids have not been tabulated it was thought that Miller-Hutchinson were the lowest bidders with Woodrich Construction company second.

ASTROLOGIST WHO PREDICTED NOMINATION OF HARDING ALSO FORETOLD HE WOULD DIE

Fate Ran True to Prophecy in The Life and Death of Warren G. Harding—Prophecy At Time of Nomination Is Recalled.

BY HARRY E. HUNT
NEA Service Writer
Washington, Aug. 6.—Fate ran true to prophecy in the life and death of Warren G. Harding. Probably no more striking instance of the influence of the stars on human affairs, as preached by occultists and astrologists, ever was known than that in which, months before his nomination, Harding was picked as the next president by a Washington astrologist, Madam Marcia, who at the time predicted that he would live only a little more than half his term.

MADAM MARCIA

"The end," she said in making this prediction in February 1920, "when it comes will be sudden, after an illness of short duration." "I went to see this astrologist with whose former predictions I was familiar, on Tuesday, July 31, when President Harding lay ill in San Francisco. The bulletins from the bedside at the time I called announced the patient was improving. He was on the highway to recovery, the attending physicians agreed.

But Madam Marcia, who had spent the morning pouring over the horoscope of the ill man, shook her head.

"It is the end," she said. "He will never recover. The crisis will come Thursday night. He will be dead Friday."

In the face of the doctor's bulletins, I smiled at her. But she was immovable, steadfast in her tragic forecast. "He can not recover," she persisted. "He will be dead by Friday."

Believers in fate will find in Madam Marcia's readings of what life held for Harding seeming proof to sustain their faith in the governing power of the stars.

Back in February, 1920, four women—all unknown to the astrologist, called on Madam Marcia. "We want our horoscopes read," they said. "We want to know which of us is to be the next first lady of the land."

The charts were drawn and Madam proceeded to the study of what they foretold. Half way through the reading she pointed to Mrs. Harding and said: "If any of you ladies are to be the first lady this is the one."

Scientists Caution Against Deadly

Washington, Aug. 8.—That hydrogen sulphide, a gas often found in and about industrial plants, is extremely poisonous, although not heretofore recognized as such, is disclosed by the Bureau of Mines after a series of tests on men and animals. The investigation showed that neuropoisoning can be produced by low concentrations of this gas and may result in respiratory paralysis followed by heart failure and death.

Discuss Laws To Aircraft Protection

St. Louis, Aug. 8.—Needed legislation for the protection of aircraft operation will be one of the principal topics of discussion at the annual meeting of the National Air Institute, which will be held here October 1-3, under the supervision of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce. This body is cooperating with a committee representing the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, Society of Automotive Engineers, American Society of Mechanical Engineers and the National Aeronautic Association.

The Third National Aero Congress, which includes the convention of the National Aeronautic Association, the governing body of aviation in this country, also will convene here October 1, simultaneously with the International Air Races.

WILL OBSERVE CENTENNIAL OF U. S. RAILROAD

American Railway Association Begin Work on Celebration Plans

PASS RESOLUTIONS

Will Show How Railway Transportation Has Developed

Chicago, Aug. 8.—Plans to celebrate the centennial of the American railroad here with an exhibition showing its evolution and effect on the nation's growth have been begun by the American Railway Association. Committees have been appointed to gather data as to an appropriate date for the celebration, and to determine the extent of the miniature world's fair which is being considered in this connection.

Three railway organizations have adopted resolutions urging the appropriate observation of a hundred years of railroad development—American Railway Engineering Association, American Railway Development Association and the Mechanical Division of the American Railway Association.

As no city has a convention hall large enough to hold all the exhibits, according to V. B. Hawthorne, secretary of Division 5, American Railway Association, he proposes the erection of a temporary structure to accommodate the 25 or more railroad bodies which would hold conventions here under the plans. Another suggestion is to hold a central exposition in Chicago with a number of smaller celebrations held simultaneously in other cities, making Chicago the center of a great railroad centennial wheel.

American railroads will participate in 1925 in the English celebration of the opening of the first railway in the world, conducted by the International Railway Congress, but it is the desire of the American Railway Association also to commemorate the American centennial, which comes in 1926.

The trackage of the American roads, according to the Interstate Commerce Commission, is 378,992 miles, not including switches and terminal lines. According to these same figures, there are now in operation approximately 70,000 locomotives, 5,500,000 freight cars and 65,000 passenger cars.

NEW STARS TO APPEAR IN OPERA

Fernand Anseau of France Will Make Debut With Chicago Civic Opera

INCLUDES MANY OTHERS

Chicago, Aug. 8.—Fernand Anseau, leading tenor in French opera, will make his American debut with the Chicago Civic Opera, which opens here November 8, according to the announcement made by the company. Arrangements are being made for the appearance of other brilliant guest artists, which will include Mme. Louise Homer. She will appear in a limited number of performances including "Samson and Delilah."

Other stars included in the regular personnel of the company for the coming season will be Mary Garden, Amelia Galli Curci, Florence MacBeth, Mary McCormic, Cyrena Van Gordon, Georges Baklanoff, Tito Schipa, Edith Mason and Feodor Chaliapin, with Giorgio Polacco again present as musical director.

"Boris Godunoff" and "L'Africain," the latter by Meyerbeer, are announced as novelties in the 1923-24 season, because they never before have been given by the Civic Opera Company. The role of Boris is said by critics to be one of Chaliapin's greatest. Among the revivals announced is that of "Zaza," with Mary Garden in the title role. Miss Garden also will appear in the revival of Massenet's "Clopacra."

Harry W. Besty, technical director, is spending the summer in Europe visiting the more famous opera houses of France, Germany and Italy in search of new ideas. He is said to be making a special study of proposed settings in Moussorgsky's "Boris Godunoff," which has become popular with American audiences.

USED MAILS TO DEFRAUD

Arraign Revivalist and Banker in Wisconsin Courts

Madison, Wis., Aug. 6.—Victory E. Arnold, banker and revivalist of this city was arraigned in the Federal court at Superior, Wis., August 7 to answer to an indictment charging him with using the mails to defraud. Arnold was president of the now bankrupt Madison Bond company and gained wide comment by his religious revival meetings in New York City and Madison before the United States government began investigating his alleged bond selling work in Wisconsin.

quired and invested money of other persons, Arnold himself takes the position that he is a victim of a "vicious circle of Madison business men" who oppose him.

The indictment sets out three alleged schemes which it says are fraudulent and which Arnold will be called upon to explain during the court hearing. He is charged with misrepresenting the value of securities offered for sale by his company, with attempting to defraud investors out of company bonds by offer of an unsecured note, and with causing the false arrest of company officials.

In December of 1921 Arnold gave the needy of Madison a Christmas dinner costing $25,000. Thereafter he led a series of revival meetings, at which he urged a return to the teachings of the Bible. There he and his family moved to New York where the revival meetings were continued.

DEER SEEN ON CASS CO. FARM

Chaffee, N. D., Aug. 8.—Mrs. J. R. Schoenbeer discovered a deer contentedly browsing in her garden on the Schoenbeer farm, a few miles east of Chaffee early yesterday. It was a small animal, and was partially hidden behind a row of tall sunflowers which run along one side of the garden. Mrs. Schoenbeer saw the animal and watched it for several minutes, without herself being discovered by the deer. She finally spoke and the deer bounded away with great leaps, disappearing in a nearby cornfield.

It is supposed to be the same animal that was seen near Harwood, N. D., some weeks ago.

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER
(Established 1873)

IT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE

The disaster which attends the failure of the crop of any man who has planted but one crop was forcibly illustrated by Commissioner of Immigration J. M. Devine, speaking before the lumbermen here yesterday. The natural method of avoiding such a disaster was pointed out with equal emphasis.

Commissioner Devine drew a parallel that was interesting and instructive. Forty years ago Barron county, Wisconsin, suffered by reason of drought, grasshoppers and cinch bugs. It was a one-crop county, depending on wheat. Today the county is populous and wealthy. Last year the county, with a population of 35,000, sold $7,200,000 worth of cream, butter and cheese. McLeod county, Minnesota, was suffering thirty-five years ago because it was a one-crop county. Last year the people of that county sold $2,700,000 worth of dairy products.

A half-century or more ago many of the middle-western states were chiefly grain raising states, with wheat as their major product. Today all are depending on diversified farming. Wisconsin was a wheat state until her people found it did not pay. The same is true of Minnesota. The message carried by the experience of the people of those states is coming westward.

Turning to North Dakota, Mr. Devine declared that the North Dakota farm can produce as good a cow as can be produced in New York. She will produce as much butterfat. North Dakota can produce as good a hog as can Iowa and prepare it for the market with North Dakota corn as well as Iowa and Illinois can with corn raised in those states. North Dakota is unexcelled as a poultry state.

It is true that farming in all sections is not in the prosperous state it should be. It is true that not all the ills of North Dakota result from the one-crop system. But the experience of other states shows clearly adversity often visits the one-crop farmer and as a rule prosperity is found with the farmer who diversifies.

The message cannot be impressed too strongly, nor repeated too often, in North Dakota, South Dakota or Montana.

HAVE A LAUGH

An Irishman and a Frenchman got into an argument about the total number of beverages, alcoholic and otherwise, in existence. Pat claimed there were 83. The Frenchman insisted there were only 82. They made a bet.

"I'll name the 83," said Pat. "First, there is water...."

"Ah, you win," the Frenchman interrupted. "I had forgotten all about that one."

This story, told by Dr. William J. Robinson, the dean of medical writers, suggests that the world prohibition movement eventually will focus on France, which probably will be the last of the important countries to go dry, if ever.

McCready Sykes, another able writer, digs up the yarn about the Scotchman who complained that he could never get any real pleasure from smoking.

"If I am smokin' my ain tobacco," said Sandy, "I can na' enjoy it for thinkin' o' the dreadful expense; and if I am smokin' a' ither body's tobacco my pipe is packed to tight that it winna draw."

Economy is a virtue, but it can be carried to the point where it takes all the joy out of life. Epidemic excessive economy, born from fear, usually ends business booms and starts depression. Prosperity is the result of widespread spending. No cause for fear, as yet. Continue buying, thereby keeping prosperity with us. The wise system is to be moderate, spending to keep business humming, also saving prudently for emergency.

The Wall Street Journal says a stock exchange firm wanted an experienced bookkeeper. An applicant, who favorably impressed the manager of the brokerage firm, was asked what salary he received on his last job.

"They paid me $125 a week."

"Who gave you that salary?"

A bankrupt bucket-shop was named.

"You apparently got $25 for your work and $100 for keeping quiet," the manager commented.

The jokes of our generation are becoming editorial in nature. Vividly they caricature important events and public trends. We are getting dangerously close to the intellectual in our humor—(dangerous, because intelligence and humor are as difficult to mix as oil and water)—but, after all, much of the news borders on the ridiculous, which makes it the logical target of the humorists.

The American sense of humor is becoming higher grade, more intelligent. If you doubt it, go back and try to get laughs out of the humorists of a few generations ago.

CHAINED

Tomadelli, Italian inventor, who lives in New Jersey, claims he has discovered how to harness the atom and make it, in a bulb, produce 100 candlepower of light for three years without batteries, renewals or any kind of electrical connections.

We are forever hearing of sensational discoveries that never materialize. But what Tomadelli proposes is inevitable, just a matter of time. We live in the midst of scores of terrific forces which, when discovered, will relieve humanity of the bulk of its work.

QUESTION

A German is murdered in England, and Scotland Yard detectives take the trail. The murderer, believed to be an Englishman, will be hanged if caught. Both are ex-soldiers, former enemies.

If he had killed his victim five years ago, when both were in uniform of opposing armies, the law would have commended him.

In other words, killing is an ethical matter in one year and a legal problem in another.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Comments reproduced in this column may or may not express the opinion of The Tribune. They are presented here in order that our readers may have both sides being discussed in the press of the day.

GONE ARE THE DAYS

Old ghosts of the Mississippi refuse to waken. The river's romance is dead. The other day two powerful towboats came storming up the lower river. The Cairo was racing the St. Louis to Cairo.

The St. Louis won, but nobody cared. Nobody bet his last "nigger" or his last acre of cotton land on the race. There were no cheering crowds at the landing. No bright-eyed belles or dashing blades waved from magnolia-shaded grounds of the riverside plantations.

It was not always so. In the days of Long Ever Ago, when there was romance on the river, the racing packets thundered around the bends with red flames shooting from their tall stacks and their black smoke darkening the river. The boats raced from dark till dawn and from dawn to dewy eve. On occasion they strained from swinging gangplank to thrashing stern-wheel with

"A nigger squat on the safety valve And her furnace crammed, rosin and pine."

The long-mustached gambler belonged in the picture. So did the toddy-drinking colonel with a goatee like Spanish moss. So also did the Southern beauty, the heiress of the cotton aristocracy. Those were the days of the Robert E. Lee and the Natheez of the Belle of Shreveport and the Prairie Belle.

It was the habit of gentlemen in those days to take their likker red and straight, but never raw.

Mark Twain, in red granite, stands on his beloved bluffs at Hannibal. He will look down the river and he will listen down the river in vain. He gave it most of the color and the romance that it has in men's hearts. He embalmed it and made it imperishable. What he gave it cannot be taken away, but it must live in his pages. There is no more romance in sandbar, bend or river reach. The packets race no more. If they did, a tender-flopping Ford could make them look as if they were standing still. ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

When Tiny Mite flew away on a lightning bug one night he had no idea where he was going.

All he knew was that the moon looked like a big silver plate, the little stars like sugar and the world like a great big plum pudding, dark and smelling forty ways at once like forty kinds of perfume.

"Gid up!" cried Tiny Mite, clicking his tongue and digging his heels into his willing steed. "Gid up and take me to the end of the earth. I'm tired of just seeing Pee Wee Land under the uddercocks and no place else. Just plumb tired of it. Gid up!"

The lightning bug didn't say anything but he went on and on and kept his lantern burning as brightly as he could. He wasted electricity, something awful he said!

But he went right on like a good lightning bug—and on and on.

"My this is fine!" cried Tiny Mite. Suddenly he had an idea. "Could you fly to the moon with me on you? I want to see what it's like up there. I want to say how do you do to the Moon Man."

Tiny Mite yawned. He was getting sleepy.

The lightning bug picked up his ears. He heard that lawn and he winked at himself.

"Why, yes I can take you to the moon," he answered. "Just close your eyes and we'll soon be there. You might get dizzy if you kept them open."

"All right," said Tiny Mite, scrooping them up tight. "They're shut."

Then the lightning bug flew straight to a moon-vine and lit on one of the big white round flowers.

The real moon had come under a cloud and no one could see it.

"It's this!" asked Tiny Mite opening his eyes. "Are we there?"

"Yes," answered the bug.

"Oh, isn't the moon lovely!" cried Tiny Mite. And doesn't it smell grand. And he sniffed and sniffed. Then he yawned again.

"I believe I'm sleepy," he murmured. "I believe I'll sleep on the moon. Good night, lightning bug."

What happened then I'll tell you tomorrow, my dears. And how the Twins rescued him!

POET'S CORNER

OUR FALLEN LEADER

A nation mourns; half mast, the Flag Proclaims the tidings far and near: Our Leader's gone to realms above, Our President no more is here.

We prayed in vain; God took him home, And left us stricken at his loss To Him alone, all things are plain, 'Tis ours to bear the heavy cross.

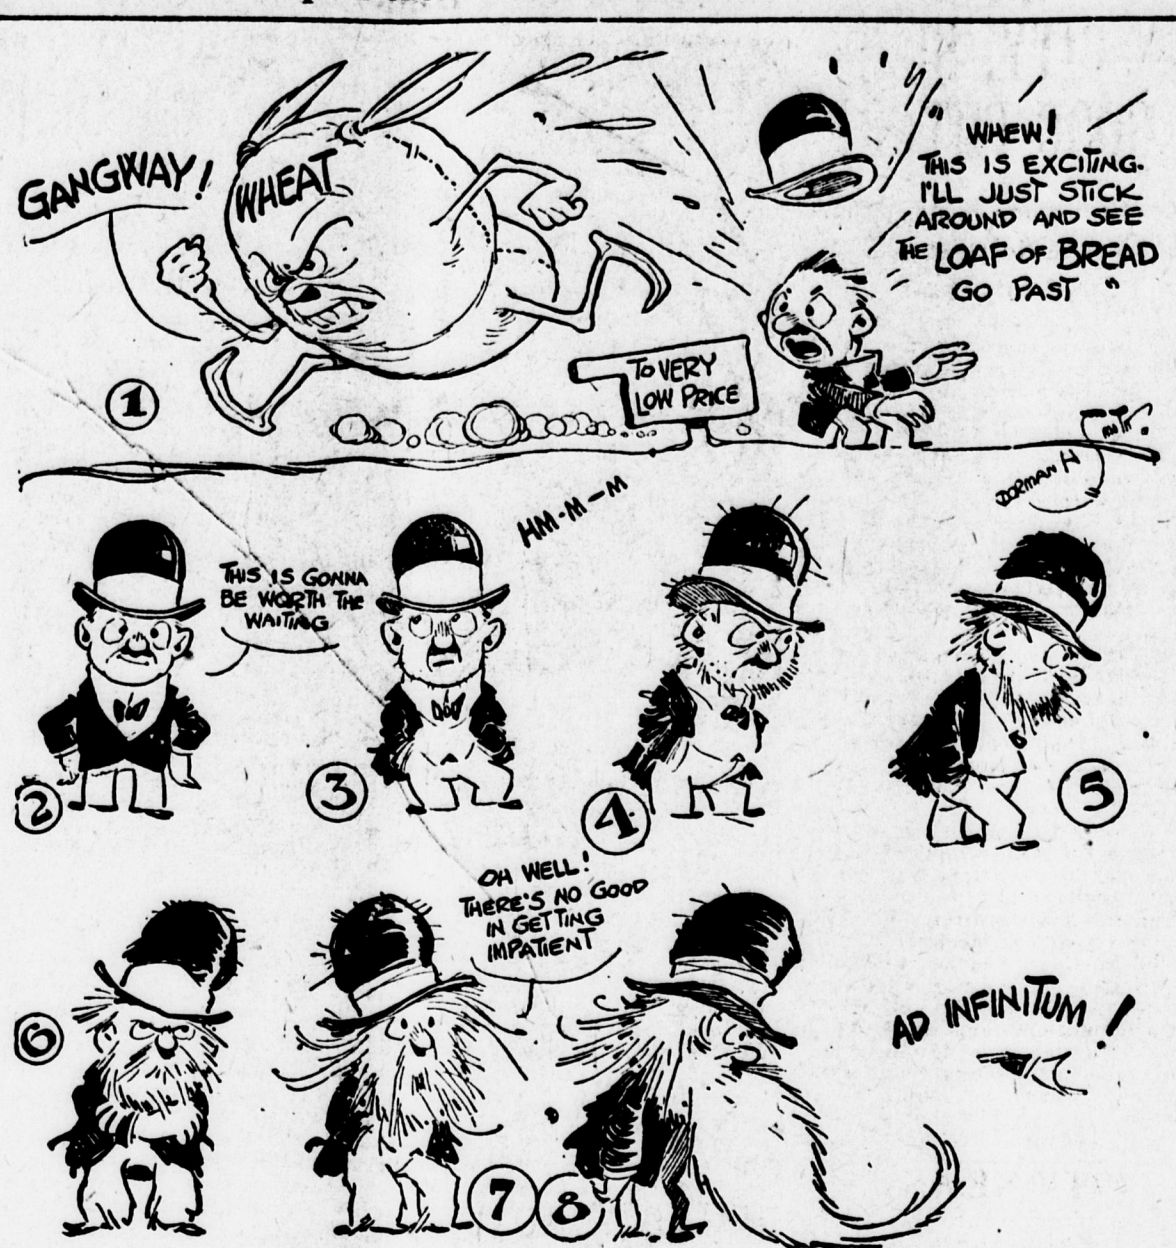

He rides ahead; perhaps this night, From some far star, or distant sphere, He looks upon the ones he loved, And sees them gathered 'round his bier.

We know not what the morrow brings, Since life as best can be but brief; And Sorrow wide her portals flings, And leaves us stricken down in grief.

We march along with solemn tread, To bear our hero to his grave, Some day shall time carve o'er his head: Here lies the bravest of the brave.

Hope Deferred Maketh the Heart Sick

LETTER FROM MRS. JOSEPH GRAVES HAMILTON TO BEATRICE GRIMSHAW.

MY DEAR BEATRICE:

It was very sweet of you to write me that long letter and I hasten to answer it.

I am enclosing Alice's last letter from England, as I think you will enjoy it. Will you please return it to me, because, although I have read it to Leslie, I do not think she was able to enjoy it as she will later.

Poor Leslie, Beatrice, has been and is still very ill. We have not been able to interest her in anything. It is such a grief to her that she lost her baby.

Leslie, you know, is one of the old-fashioned girls as far as children are concerned. She always declared she was going to have a large family. In some way she seemed to feel, however—we have learned since the accident—that Jack did not care for children.

This is a mistaken idea. Jack loves children. Any way she had not told him of the baby that was coming. Consequently after the accident it's been much harder for her to bear than if she and Jack had talked over its coming.

We have just about come to the conclusion that it will be necessary to adopt a baby. Anyway, I am going to try and find one tomorrow and bring it over to the Conventual Home, where we have taken Leslie, and see how it affects her. We are doing this as a last resort, because if it does not fill her interest the doctor tells us he will despair of doing anything for her.

My dear, it is rather selfish of me to burden you with Leslie's troubles just when you have decided to marry that young man of yours. Even though you should have as hard a time as Leslie is having, I could not wish you not to marry. Of course Leslie thinks now that she is the unhappiest woman on earth, but she will look back upon it, when time has given her the right perspective, as a part of her destiny, and probably she will say that it was all for the best after all.

You know when I was a very young woman I lost a boy baby. At the time I thought I would never get over it, but now it seems only an unpleasant dream—but a dream from which I awakened to a closer companionship with, and a closer devotion to, my husband. I learned to appreciate our "oneness" at that time.

If I could only make Jack and Leslie talk over the loss of their child, I am sure everything would come out all right. But for some reason Leslie seems to feel the child belonged to her alone, and Jack is afraid to mention it to her because he does not want to grieve her any more than she is grieving now.

Both Mr. Hamilton and myself are very glad to know that young Atherton will probably regain his sight. Mr. Hamilton is going to ask Sally to bring her husband over to our city, because you know we have one of the greatest eye specialists in the country here, and the sooner Sam regains his sight, the sooner Mr. Hamilton can put him to work.

I am expecting to see Karl Whitney today before he sails for England. We have not told Alice yet that Leslie has been ill, as you will see from her letter. I am sending my answer by Karl to tell her the sad news. It will be easier for her if Karl is there to supplement my letter with explanations.

Please write me, my dear. Remember that if it is not so that I can come to your wedding, to which you so kindly invited me, I shall send you all best wishes that are in my heart. I heartily congratulate the young man you are going to marry, because of all of Leslie's friends, you, my dear Beatrice, have always seemed the nearest to me.

Because I have not been able to make any purchases, I am asking Mr. Hamilton to send you a check today. Will you please buy with it the thing you desire most and accept it with the love of the mother of Leslie.

Sincerely yours, ALICE CARTON HAMILTON.

THE YELLOW SEVEN

China Tea!

NEA Service, Inc. 1923

By Edmund Snell.

BEGINN HERE TODAY

Peter Pennington, detective, is engaged to marry Monica Viney, sister of Captain John Hewitt, Commissioner of Police at Jesselton, British North Borneo. Pennington is detailed by the government to run to earth The Yellow Seven, a gang of Chinese bandits. Peter is known as "Chinese" Pennington because of his slant eyes and his ability to disguise himself and mingle with Chinese without any one suspecting his identity. Pennington traces Chai-Hung to his latest hiding-place.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"The pack was gradually diminished. There were only 18 cards left. I counted them as they lay in the yellow light of the lamp. There was a dramatic pause and in the grim silence that followed only one man spoke. It was Lai-Ho-Hyde's old servant—and he spoke so softly that I only caught one single word of any name! And then a strange thing happened. The arch-bandit, who had lain still and motionless as a corpse, raised himself on one arm. His fingers, emaciated with the fever that consumed him, hovered over the talisman which he held in a single card. He was too weak to take it and the thing fluttered to the floor, falling face-upmost not a yard from where I waited."

"The Yellow Seven!" Hewitt's lips formed the words.

Pennington inclined his head. "The lot had fallen upon Chai-Hung himself to take my life. And Chai-Hung lay like a dead thing, weakened even with the sheer exertion of his effort, while his intended victim watched unseen!"

At the foot of the bamboo ladder the Commissioner turned to Pennington.

"I thought you'd like to know that Monica insisted in coming with me on this trip. To tell you the honest truth, I hadn't the heart to refuse her. We're staying at Dawson's bungalow. Why don't you run along and see her?"

A look of pain crept into the other's face.

"I haven't," he said thickly. "I want to see this thing through first."

The other nodded sympathetically. "When are you going to collar him?"

"Tonight. Come to me here at nine—and come armed."

The Commissioner's form was out of sight before Pennington turned on his heel and went back to the bamboo bridge where Hewitt had first found him.

The sun was already at its zenith when Captain John Hewitt—Commissioner of Police—halted abruptly at a spot where two jungle paths crossed. He realized that he had lost his bearings. It was precisely at that moment that he began to regret that Pennington had not offered to accompany him. Pennington had an uncanny knack of finding his way through the thicket that was absolutely unknown to him. It was a short, extraordinary freak of birth that had presented him with the eyes of an Oriental had gifted him also with the mysterious instincts of the pre-meval savage.

The track was imperceptibly growing wider and wider as he went. The rays of the sun that poured down on him where the trees were set farther apart. He glanced up suddenly, then, white to the roots of his hair, darted behind the trunk of a jackfruit-tree, flattening himself against the bark. He knew that he was in a dangerous wrong path for straight ahead of him rose a wall of rock, sheer and frowning. At the foot of the rock nestled a broad, squat hut, roofed with dried sago-leaves. Sitting tranquilly at his ease, his fat fingers interlaced over his stomach, he stared at Pennington with an appreciable extent, was Chai-Hung.

He sat alone, wrapped in a blanket acquired in one of his numerous raids, his feet crossed in front of him, his back resting against one of the poles that supported the building.

For a matter of seconds the Commissioner of Police stared in mute fascination at this apparition. A prolonged scrutiny left no doubt in his mind as to the accuracy of Pennington's statement. Chai-Hung had been ill. There were dark rings under his eyes, his cheeks had fallen in, and the rolls of fat that hung from his jaw were suspended like the shapeless lines of a deflating balloon.

The bandit rose to his feet with a sudden effort, clutching at the pole for support. Presently he steadied himself and came slowly toward the spot where Hewitt was hiding, his beady eyes blazing with a light that was almost supernatural. The Commissioner, fumbling for his hip-pocket, swayed sideways and broke the spell that held him. Scarcely conscious of what he was doing, he left the trees and, covering half the distance that separated them, leveled his automatic deliberately at Chai-Hung.

The Oriental did not flinch. He let the blanket slip from his broad shoulders and returned the other's gaze with a placid smile.

"You want to see me, Captain Hewitt?" he inquired with that oily smoothness he could pour over the habitual harshness of his intonation when he chose.

"I want you to put both your hands above your head, Mr. Chai-Hung, and to come with me immediately."

"May I ask where you propose taking me? It would be unkind perhaps to remind you that you have lost your way?"

He lifted both arms as he spoke, apparently in accordance with the commissioner's request, and at that moment the commissioner felt himself pinned securely from behind. So suddenly and cleverly conceived was the attack that the Englishman was overpowered without a struggle, bound hand and foot with leathern thongs swiftly and securely knotted. And as he lay helpless at the bandit's feet, Chai-Hung, perched on the stool of carved blackwood that still remained outside his temporary residence.

"I am going to take you into my confidence, Mr. Commissioner," he said. "I am a desperate man, driven by your call 'Ho Wee' to a point of suffering privations that do not together agree with a man of my habits. I am ill, as you see, but I am going to recover. My wings have been clipped, but they will grow again. The Chinese dragon, Captain Hewitt, is many-headed. Each head has a fang." The corners of his evil mouth turned down. "Have you ever heard of a sixth sense?—a mysterious intuition that indicates when one is being spied upon? I felt the prompting of that sense—last night. The man they call 'Ho Wee' sees in the Dark came to my house and you will understand me fully when I tell you that I returned the call. The man who brought this Pennington to me—I have dealt with. I have put out his eyes, so that he will never see again. I have removed his fingers, so that he may never hold a pen or a sword. There are only three people in existence who stand between Chai-Hung and the freedom of movement he desires. You know them all, Captain Hewitt. There is Chinese Pennington, your sister—and yourself. Now, observed that you are ready to separate them. You are ready to use my power. Pennington is waiting for nightfall—down by the sago-swamp, and Mrs. Viney is alone in Dawson's bungalow—alone, because I have arranged that Dawson shall be kept away from his home for a month. He should never have returned. He should have been kept away and a preposterously exaggerated finger-nail pointed toward the Commissioner. "Each shall perish in his turn, and each in a different manner. I am reserving you for the last, because I should like you to live long enough to realize the power of Chai-Hung, the inevitable triumph of The Yellow Seven. I think I can safely assure you that you will not have to wait long!"

He reached for a branch and pulling back to his feet, went slowly

The middie dress with the pleated skirt, sketched here, would fulfill almost any school regulations, however strict. The blouse can be made of galatea, rep or some stout washable material. The skirt could be of serge or tricotine. It is all cotton or all woolen, it is the practical style for school wear.

N. P. PRESIDENT IN CITY, SEES GOOD FUTURE

Many Conditions Point to Betterment in North Dakota. He Points Out

"Actual conditions in North Dakota seem to be very much better than we have been led to believe" was the comment of Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific railroad on his arrival in Bismarck today on a trip west on the Yellowstone Comet.

"North Dakota is going to get a great deal of cash in return for this year's crop, on the whole, despite disappointing yields and the very unsatisfactory price conditions."

"One thing which struck us was the fact that so many farmers are doing their own work and getting along without hiring floating labor this fall. That means the salvage for the people of North Dakota of a lot of money that usually goes out of the state."

Mr. Donnelly reports that there will be a plentiful supply of cars to handle the crop this fall, from present indications.

"Conditions are entirely different from last year," he declared. "The Northern Pacific and other northwestern railroads have many more cars and they are in much better condition than last year, while the eastern lines are in much better shape to return our cars promptly when we ship them east."

AT THE MOVIES

CAPITOL

"The Ragged Edge" was shown at the Capitol theater last night, and proved to be an absorbing love and mystery story with beautiful scenic effects. It was made into a photograph by the Distinctive Pictures Corporation from Harold MacGrath's romance of the South Seas, and brought to the city the best of the performances of "two young fools" who find happiness in a far-off land.

WOULDN'T BE A SHEIK?

There usually comes a time when one can dress the part that could suit one best in life. That's at a masquerade! What man wouldn't want to be a sheik with a harem in Arabia or somewhere conveniently near-by?

Here's what a real sheik would dress like if he were living the part instead of playing it. The turban has ends flying down the back. The waistcoat and breeches are of corduroy, and the sash of red or purple silk. The lady with him, who for respectability's sake we may call Mrs. Sheik, is attired in the matchless manner of the favorites of the harem.

Found A Wife By Advertising For Her And They've Been Happy For 60 Years

For 16 months they exchanged letters. But it was not until 1883 that Webb obtained a furlough. He hurried up to the little town near Rochester to meet the girl he had learned to love by mail.

Within the 15 days they were married, and the young bridegroom went back to the regiment with a new incentive to bring the war to a close. He fought in 37 battles and witnessed the surrender of General Lee. Then he came back home to his waiting bride.

"Courtship in those days wasn't as easy as it is now," says Henry. "We rode horseback when we went a'calling, and had to beat the other fellows to it. There were no phones or rural mail deliveries then, either."

"That's right," acquiesced Mrs. Webb. "And the girls then didn't think so much about dress. I had two dresses a year, one of flax and one of wool, both home-grown and home-made. We saved our shoes and didn't put them on until just before we started for church or a dance."

The secret of their happiness? "Work," they chorus. "We've been happy because we haven't had time to be anything else. Young folks these days don't work hard enough. The trouble nowadays is that married folks have things too easy."

Magazine last year led to her engagement by the Distinctive Company. The beauty which attracted attention to her is revealed in countless scenes. Lunt is the famous star of the legitimate stage who made his film debut in "Backbone."

Harmon Weight directed this picture. It is the story of a young American who flees from home because of a misdeed which preys on his conscience. He meets the girl in Canton. She, too, has fled from her home because her father, a missionary, had denied her love and sympathy.

Two marry. It is through the devotion of the young wife that the fugitive American is made to stand on his own feet. What his guilt was and how he is cleared from the mystery of the story and make of it absorbing screen entertainment.

Should husbands pick the household furniture without consulting their wives?

Should they limit their wives to charge accounts and virtually no spending money and then say to their better halves, "You have everything you need—what more could a woman want?"

Whether they should or not, these are some of the things that the hero husband does in Katherine MacDonal's picture, "The Lonely Road," showing at the Eltinge theater Thursday.

The net result is that wifery runs away to the big city to find freedom and independence.

Young Mr. Husband wakes up with a terrible jolt and then the highly dramatic plot begins to move fast and furious.

Lung Trouble Causes Death of A. Schell

Anton H. Schell, of Lemmon, S. D., age 18, died yesterday morning at 9:30 o'clock at a local hospital after a long illness due to lung trouble. The father of Mr. Schell is convalescing in the hospital as a result of an operation. For that reason the remains will be held until the latter part of the week when they will be taken to Richardson for burial. The deceased leaves his parents, three brothers and two sisters to mourn his death.

CARD OF THANKS We wish to thank many friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy and the many flowers given during the illness and death of our darling baby, Marjorie June. Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Jensen and daughter.

MR. AND MRS. HENRY S. WEBB

By NEA Service. Auburn, N. Y., Aug. 8.—"It pays to advertise—for a wife."

So chorus Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Webb, one of Auburn's oldest couples. "Even if it is only a two-inch ad," says Henry.

"For the return was great," chimes in Grandmother Webb. "It brought 60 years of happiness."

"Sixty-one," retorted her husband. "And they almost had their first quarrel."

But a kindly smile from the old lady stopped the man, and they told their story.

Back in the early days of the Civil War, advertising wasn't the science it is today, and Henry didn't have much confidence in the "new-fangled idea." But he had enlisted with the First New York Light Artillery, was away from his friends and home at Malone, N. Y., and lonesome. Besides he was only 15. So he decided to take a chance.

He sent a two-line advertisement to the Literary Companion, published in Pennfield, asking if some "girl wouldn't write to him 'just for the fun of matrimony.'"

The ad came to Susan E. Sharp, typesetter in the composing room of the little paper. She wasn't lonesome, but she was patriotic. So she wrote to the young soldier boy.

Minot Fair Advisers Named

The Northwest Fair Board at Minot, N. D., has appointed an advisory committee to act with the board, under the provisions of the act passed by the legislature recognizing the fair. The governor, commissioner of agriculture and labor and state auditor are, ex officio, members of the advisory committee. One member from each judicial district in the state is also named. Found A Wife By Advertising For Her And They've Been Happy For 60 Years

For 16 months they exchanged letters. But it was not until 1883 that Webb obtained a furlough. He hurried up to the little town near Rochester to meet the girl he had learned to love by mail.

Within the 15 days they were married, and the young bridegroom went back to the regiment with a new incentive to bring the war to a close. He fought in 37 battles and witnessed the surrender of General Lee. Then he came back home to his waiting bride.

"Courtship in those days wasn't as easy as it is now," says Henry. "We rode horseback when we went a'calling, and had to beat the other fellows to it. There were no phones or rural mail deliveries then, either."

"That's right," acquiesced Mrs. Webb. "And the girls then didn't think so much about dress. I had two dresses a year, one of flax and one of wool, both home-grown and home-made. We saved our shoes and didn't put them on until just before we started for church or a dance."

The secret of their happiness? "Work," they chorus. "We've been happy because we haven't had time to be anything else. Young folks these days don't work hard enough. The trouble nowadays is that married folks have things too easy."

Magazine last year led to her engagement by the Distinctive Company. The beauty which attracted attention to her is revealed in countless scenes. Lunt is the famous star of the legitimate stage who made his film debut in "Backbone."

Harmon Weight directed this picture. It is the story of a young American who flees from home because of a misdeed which preys on his conscience. He meets the girl in Canton. She, too, has fled from her home because her father, a missionary, had denied her love and sympathy.

Two marry. It is through the devotion of the young wife that the fugitive American is made to stand on his own feet. What his guilt was and how he is cleared from the mystery of the story and make of it absorbing screen entertainment.

Should husbands pick the household furniture without consulting their wives?

Should they limit their wives to charge accounts and virtually no spending money and then say to their better halves, "You have everything you need—what more could a woman want?"

Whether they should or not, these are some of the things that the hero husband does in Katherine MacDonal's picture, "The Lonely Road," showing at the Eltinge theater Thursday.

The net result is that wifery runs away to the big city to find freedom and independence.

Young Mr. Husband wakes up with a terrible jolt and then the highly dramatic plot begins to move fast and furious.

EVERY-DAY DRESS

The every-day dress is really the most important after all, since it must stand every-day wear. Most schools advocate a simple dress in a comfortable, sensible style.

The middy dress with the pleated skirt, sketched here, would fulfill almost any school regulations, however strict. The blouse can be made of galles, rep or some stout washable material. The skirt could be of serge or tricotine.

Whether the dress is all cotton or all woolen, it is the practical style for school wear.

N. P. PRESIDENT IN CITY, SEES GOOD FUTURE

Many Conditions Point to Betterment in North Dakota, He Points Out

"Actual conditions in North Dakota seem to be very much better than we have been led to believe" was the comment of Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific railroad on his arrival in Bismarck today on a trip west on the Yellowstone Comet.

"North Dakota is going to get a great deal of cash in return for this year's crop, on the whole, despite disappointing yields and the very unsatisfactory price conditions."

"One thing which struck us was the fact that so many farmers are doing their own work and getting along without hiring floating labor this fall. That means the salvage for the people of North Dakota of a lot of money that usually goes out of the state."

Mr. Donnelly reports that there will be a plentiful supply of cars to handle the crop this fall, from present indications.

"Conditions are entirely different from last year," he declared.

"The Northern Pacific and other northwestern railroads have many more cars and they are in much better condition than last year, while the eastern lines are in much better shape to return our cars promptly when we ship them east."

CAPITOL
"The Ragged Edge" was shown at the Capitol theater last night, and proved to be an absorbing love and mystery story with beautiful scenic effects. It was made into a photoplay by the Distinctive Pictures Corporation from Harold MacGrath's romance of the South Seas, and brought to the fore Alfred Lunt and Mimi Palmer, who gave splendid performances of "two young fools" who find happiness in a far-off land.

Miss Palmeri is the new screen Cinderella whose portrait is a fashion magazine last year led to her engagement by the Distinctive Company. The beauty which attracted attention to her is revealed in countless scenes. Lunt is the famous star of the legitimate stage who made his film debut in "Backbone."

Harmon Weight directed this picture. It is the story of a young American who flees from home because of a misdeed which preys on his conscience. He meets the girl in Canton. Found A Wife By Advertising For Her And They've Been Happy For 60 Years

MR. AND MRS. HENRY S. WEBB

By NEA Service.
Auburn, N. Y., Aug. 8.—"It pays to advertise for a wife."

So chorus Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Webb, one of Auburn's oldest couples. "Even if it is only a two-inch ad," says Henry.

"For the return was great," chimed in Grandmother Webb. "It brought 60 years of happiness."

"Sixty-one," retorted her husband. "And they almost had their first quarrel."

But a kindly smile from the old lady stopped the man, and they told their story.

Back in the early days of the Civil War, advertising wasn't the science it is today, and Henry didn't have much confidence in the "new-fangled idea." But he had enlisted with the First New York Light Artillery, was away from his friends and home at Malone, N. Y., and lonesome. Besides he was only 15. So he decided to take a chance.

He sent a two-line advertisement to the Literary Companion, published in Pennfield, asking if some girl wouldn't write to him "just for the fun of matrimony."

The ad came to Susan E. Sharp, typesetter in the composing room of the little paper. She wasn't lonesome, but she was patriotic. So she wrote to the young soldier boy.

For 16 months they exchanged letters. But it was not until 1863 that Webb obtained a furlough. He hurried up to the little town near Rochester to meet the girl he had learned to love by mail.

Within the 15 days they were married, and the young bridegroom went back to the regiment with a new incentive to bring the war to a close. He fought in 37 battles and witnessed the surrender of General Lee.

Then he came back home to his waiting bride.

"Courtship in those days wasn't as easy as it is now," says Henry. "We rode horseback when we went a'calling, and had to beat the other fellows to it. There were no phones or rural mail deliveries then, either."

"That's right," acquiesced Mrs. Webb. "And the girls then didn't think so much about dress. I had two dresses a year, one of flax and one of wool, both home-grown and home-made. We saved our shoes and didn't put them on until just before we started for church or a dance."

"Work," they chorus. "We've been happy because we haven't had time to be anything else. Young folks these days don't work hard enough. The trouble nowadays is that married folks have things too easy."

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER
(Established 1873)

IT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE
The disaster which attends the failure of the crop of any man who has planted but one crop was forcibly illustrated by Commissioner of Immigration J. M. Devine, speaking before the lumbermen here yesterday. The natural method of avoiding such a disaster was pointed out with equal emphasis.

Commissioner Devine drew a parallel that was interesting and instructive. Forty years ago Barron county, Wisconsin, suffered by reason of drought, grasshoppers and cinch bugs. It was a one-crop county, depending on wheat. Today the county is populous and wealthy. Last year the county, with a population of 35,000, sold $7,200,000 worth of cream, butter and cheese. McLeod county, Minnesota, was suffering thirty-five years ago because it was a one-crop county. Last year the people of that county sold $2,700,000 worth of dairy products.

A half-century or more ago many of the middle-western states were chiefly grain raising states, with wheat as their major product. Today all are depending on diversified farming. Wisconsin was a wheat state until her people found it did not pay. The same is true of Minnesota. The message carried by the experience of the people of those states is coming westward.

Turning to North Dakota, Mr. Devine declared that the North Dakota farm can produce as good a cow as can be produced in New York. She will produce as much butterfat. North Dakota can produce as good a hog as can Iowa and prepare it for the market with North Dakota corn as well as Iowa and Illinois can with corn raised in those states. North Dakota is unexcelled as a poultry state.

It is true that farming in all sections is not in the prosperous state it should be. It is true that not all the ills of North Dakota result from the one-crop system. But the experience of other states shows clearly adversity often visits the one-crop farmer and as a rule prosperity is found with the farmer who diversifies.

The message cannot be impressed too strongly, nor repeated too often, in North Dakota, South Dakota or Montana.

HAVE A LAUGH
An Irishman and a Frenchman got into an argument about the total number of beverages, alcoholic and otherwise, in existence. Pat claimed there were 83. The Frenchman insisted there were only 82. They made a bet.
"I'll name the 83," said Pat. "First, there is water."
"Ah, you win," the Frenchman interrupted. "I had forgotten all about that one."
This story, told by Dr. William J. Robinson, the dean of medical writers, suggests that the world prohibition movement eventually will focus on France, which probably will be the last of the important countries to go dry, if ever.

M'Cready Sykes, another able writer, digs up the yarn about the Scotchman who complained that he could never get any real pleasure from smoking.
"If I am smokin' my ain tobacco," said Sandy, "I can na' enjoy it for thinkin' o' the dreadful expense; and if I am smokin' a'ither body's tobacco my pipe is packed to tight that it winna draw."
Economy is a virtue, but it can be carried to the point where it takes all the joy out of life. Epidemic excessive economy, born from fear, usually ends business booms and starts depression. Prosperity is the result of widespread spending. No cause for fear, as yet. Continue buying, thereby keeping prosperity with us. The wise system is to be moderate, spending to keep business humming, also saving prudently for emergency.

The Wall Street Journal says a stock exchange firm wanted an experienced bookkeeper. An applicant, who favorably impressed the manager of the brokerage firm, was asked what salary he received on his last job.
"They paid me $125 a week,"
"Who gave you that salary?"
A bankrupt bucket-shop was named.
"You apparently got $25 for your work and $100 for keeping quiet," the manager commented.

The jokes of our generation are becoming editorial in nature. Vividly they caricature important events and public trends. We are getting dangerously close to the intellectual in our humor—(dangers, because intelligence and humor are as difficult to mix as oil and water)—but, after all, much of the news borders on the ridiculous, which makes it the logical target of the humorists.

The American sense of humor is becoming higher grade, more intelligent. If you doubt it, go back and try to get laughs out of the humorists of a few generations ago.

Tomadelli, Italian inventor, who lives in New Jersey, claims he has discovered how to harness the atom and make it, in a bulb, produce 100 candlepower of light for three years without batteries, renewals or any kind of electrical connections.
We are forever hearing of sensational discoveries that never materialize. But what Tomadelli proposes is inevitable, just a matter of time. We live in the midst of scores of terrific forces which, when discovered, will relieve humanity of the bulk of its work.

QUESTION
A German is murdered in England, and Scotland Yard detectives take the trail. The murderer, believed to be an Englishman, will be hanged if caught. Both are ex-soldiers, former enemies.
If he had killed his victim five years ago, when both were in uniform of opposing armies, the law would have commended him.

In other words, killing is an ethical matter in one year and a legal problem in another.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Comments reproduced in this column may or may not express the opinion of The Tribune. They are presented here in order that our readers may be both sides of important issues which are being discussed in the press of the day.

GONE ARE THE DAYS

Old ghosts of the Mississippi refuse to waken. The river's romance is dead. The other day two powerful towboats came a-storming up the lower river. The Cairo was racing the St. Louis to Cairo.

The St. Louis won, but nobody cared. Nobody bet his last "nigger" or his last acre of cotton land on the race. There were no cheering crowds at the landing. No light-eyed belles or dashing blades waved from magnolia-shaded grounds of the riverside plantations.

It was not always so. In the days of Long Ever Ago, when there was romance on the river, the racing packets thundered around the bends with red flames shooting from their tall stacks and their black smoke darkening the river. The boats raced from dark till dawn and from dawn to dewy eve. On occasion they strained from swinging gangplank to thrashing stern-wheel with

"A bigger squat on the safety valve and her furnace crammed, rosin and pine."
The long-mustached gambler belonged in the picture. So did the tiddy-drinking colonel with a goatee like Spanish moss. So also did the Southern beauty, the heiress of the cotton aristocracy. Those were the days of the Robert E. Lee and the Nathan of the Ball of Shrove-tide and the Prairie Belle. It was the habit of gentlemen in those days to take their likker red and straight, but never raw.

Mark Twain, in red granite, stands on his beloved bluffs at Hannibal. He will look down the river and he will think down the river in vain. He gave it most of the color and the romance that it has in men's hearts. He embalmed it and made it imperishable. What he gave it cannot be taken away, but it must live in his pages. There is no more romance in sandbar, bend or river reach. The past is no more. The past may make them cry if they were standing still. Gone are the days!—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

When Tiny Mite flew away on a lightning bug one night he had no idea where he was going. All he knew was that the moon looked like a big silver plate, the little stars like sugar and the world like a great big plum pudding, dark and smelling forty ways at once like forty kinds of perfume.

"Gid up!" cried Tiny Mite, flicking his tongue and digging his heels into his willing steed, "and up and take me to the end of the earth. I'm tired of just seeing Poo Wee Land and the burdocks and no place else. Just plumb tired of it, gid up!"

The lightning bug didn't say anything but he went on and on and kept his lantern burning as brightly as he could. He wasted electricity something awful—he did!

But he went right on like a good lightning bug—on and on and on.

"My this is fine!" cried Tiny Mite, "and this is fine!" "Could I want to see what it's like up there, I want to see how do you do to the Moon Man?"

Tiny Mite yawned. "He was getting sleepy."

The lightning bug picked up his ears. He heard that lawn and he winked at himself.

"Why, yes I can take you to the moon," he answered. "Just close your eyes and we'll soon be there. You might get dizzy if you kept them open."

"All right," said Tiny Mite, screwing them up tight. "They're shut."

Then the lightning bug flew straight to a moon-vine and lit on one of the big white round flowers.

The real moon had gone under a cloud and Tiny Mite could see it.

"It's it!" asked Tiny Mite opening his eyes. "Are we there?"

"Yes," answered the bug. "Oh, isn't the moon lovely!" cried Tiny Mite. And doesn't it smell grand. And he sniffed and sniffed. Then he yawned again.

"I believe I'm sleepy," he murmured. "I believe I'll sleep on the moon. Good night lightning bug."

What happened then Tiny Mite told you tomorrow, my dears. And how the Twins rescued him!

POET'S CORNER

OUR FALLEN LEADER

A nation mourns; half mast, the flag Proclaims the tidings far and near: Our Leader's gone to realms above, Our President no more is here.

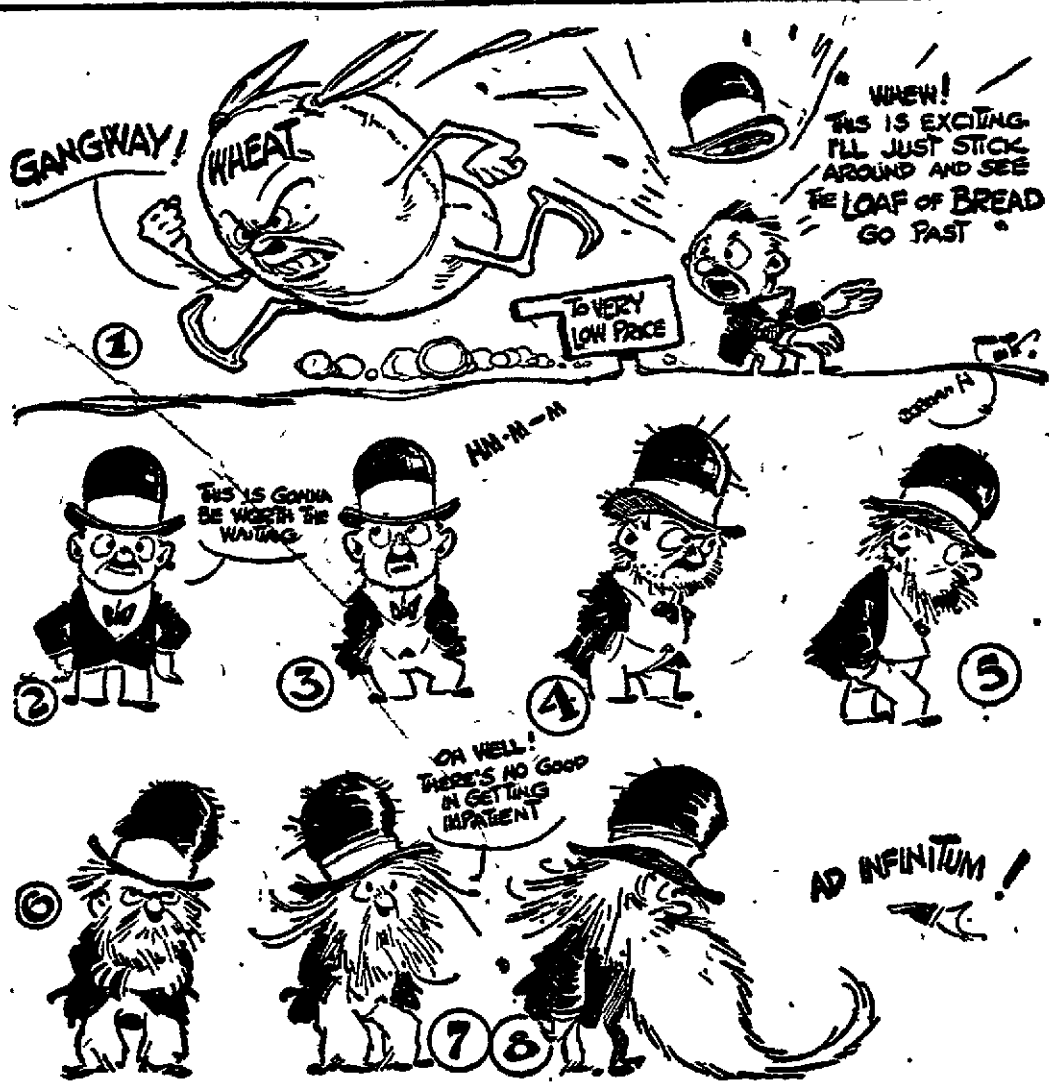

We prayed in vain; God took him home. And left us stricken at his loss To him alone, all things are plain, 'Tis ours to bear the heavy cross.

He rides ahead; perhaps this night, From some far star, or distant sphere, He looks upon the ones he loved, And sees them gathered 'round his bier.

We know not what the morrow brings, Since life as best can be but brief; And sorrow wide her portals flings, And leaves us stricken down in grief.

We march along with solemn tread, To bear our hero to his grave, Some day shall time carve o'er his head; Here lies the bravest of the brave. —Florence Borneo.

Hope Deferred Maketh the Heart Sick

LETTER FROM MRS. JOSEPH GRAYES HAMILTON TO BEATRICE GRIMSHAW.

MY DEAR BEATRICE:

It was very sweet of you to write me that long letter and I hasten to answer it.

I am enclosing Alice's last letter from England, as I think you will enjoy it. Will you please return it to me, because, although I have read it to Leslie, I do not think she was able to enjoy it as she will later.

Poor Leslie, Beatrice, has been and is still very ill. We have not been able to interest her in anything. It is such a grief to her that she lost her baby.

Leslie, you know, is one of the old-fashioned girls as far as children are concerned. She always declared she was going to have a large family. In some way she seemed to feel, however, we have learned since the accident—that Jack did not care for children.

This is a mistaken idea. Jack loves children. Any way she had not told him of the baby that was coming. Consequently after the accident his loss was much harder for her to bear than if she and Jack had talked over its coming.

We have just about come to the conclusion that it will be necessary to adopt a baby. Anyway, I am going to try and find one tomorrow and bring it over to the Convalescent Home, where we have taken Leslie, and see how it affects her. We are doing this as a last resort, because if it does not fill her interest the doctor tells us he will despair of doing anything for her.

My dear, it is rather selfish of me to burden you with Leslie's troubles just when you have decided to marry that young man of yours. Even though you should have as hard a time as Leslie is having, I could not wish you not to marry. Of course Leslie thinks now that she is the unluckiest woman on earth, but she will look back upon it, when time has given her the right perspective, as a part of her destiny, and probably she will say that it was all for the best after all.

You know when I was a very young woman I lost a boy baby. At the time I thought I would never get over it, but now it seems only an unpleasant dream—but a dream from which I awakened to a closer companionship with, and a closer devotion to, my husband. I learned to appreciate our "oneness" at that time.

If I could only make Jack and Leslie talk over the loss of their child, I am sure everything would come out all right. But for some reason Leslie seems to feel the child belonged to her alone, and Jack is afraid to mention it to her because he does not want to grieve her any more than she is grieving now.

Both Mr. Hamilton and myself are very glad to know that young Atherton will probably regain his sight. Mr. Hamilton is going to ask Sally to bring her husband over to our city, because you know we have one of the greatest eye specialists in the country here, and the sooner Sam regains his sight, the sooner Mr. Hamilton can put him to work.

I am expecting to see Karl Whitely to see before he sails for England. We have not told Alice yet that Leslie has been ill, as you will see from her letter. I am sending my answer by Karl to tell her the sad news. It will be easier for her if Karl is there to supplement my letter with explanations.

Please write me, my dear, and remember that if it is not so that I can come to your wedding, to which you so kindly invited me, I shall send you all best wishes that are in my heart. I heartily congratulate the young man you are going to marry, because of all of Leslie's friends, you, my dear Beatrice, have always seemed the nearest to me.

Because I have not been able to make any purchases, I am asking Mr. Hamilton to send you a check today. Will you please buy with it the thing you desire most and accept it with the love of the mother of Leslie?

Sincerely yours,
ALICE CARTON HAMILTON.

China Tea!

NEA Service, Inc. 1923

By Edmund Sachl

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Peter Pennington, detective, is engaged to marry Monica Vunry, sister of Captain John Hewitt, Commissioner of Police at Jesselton, British North Borneo. Pennington is detailed by the government to run to earth The Yellow Seven, a gang of Chinese bandits. Peter is known as "Chinese" Pennington because of his slant eyes and his ability to disguise himself and mingle with Chinese without any one suspecting his identity. Pennington traces Chai-Hung to his latest hiding-place.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
The pack was gradually diminishing. There were only 18 cards left. I counted them as they lay in the yellow light of the lamp. There was a dramatic pause and in the grim silence that followed only one man spoke. It was Lai-Ho-Hyde's old servant—and he spoke so softly that I only caught one single word—my own name! And then a strange thing happened. The arch-bandit, who had lain still and motionless as a corpse, raised himself on one arm. His fingers, emaciated with the fever that consumed him, hovered over the table—then dropped on to a single card. He was too weak to take it and the thing fluttered to the floor, falling face-upward not a yard from where I waited.

"The Yellow Seven!" Hewitt's lips formed the words.
Pennington inclined his head.
"The lot had fallen upon Chai-Hung himself to take my life. And Chai-Hung lay like a dead thing, weakened even with the sheer exertion of his effort, while his intended victim watched him die."

At the foot of the bamboo ladder the Commissioner turned to Pennington.
"I thought you'd like to know that Monica insisted in coming with me on this trip. To tell you the honest truth, I hadn't the heart to refuse her. We're staying at Dawson's bungalow. Why don't you run along and see her."

A look of pain crept into the other's face.
"I haven't," he said thickly. "I want to see this thing through first."

The other nodded sympathetically.
"When are you going to collar him?"

"Tonight. Come to me here at nine—and come armed."

The Commissioner's form was out of sight before Pennington turned on his heel and went back to the bamboo bridge where Hewitt had first found him.

The sun was already at its zenith when Captain John Hewitt, Commissioner of Police, halted abruptly at a spot where two jungle paths met—and realized that he had lost his bearings. It was precisely at that moment that he began to regret that Pennington had not offered to accompany him. Pennington had an uncanny knack of finding his way through territory that was absolutely unknown to him. It was as if that extraordinary freak of birth that had presented him with the eyes of an Oriental had gifted him also with the mysterious instincts of the jungle.

The track was imperceptibly growing wider and at intervals he felt the rays of the sun that poured down on him when the trees were not further apart. He glanced up suddenly, then, white to the roots of his hair, darted behind the trunk of a jack-fruit tree, flattening himself against the bark. He knew now that he had taken the wrong path for straight ahead of him rose a wall of rock, sheer and frowning. At the foot of the rock nestled a broad, squat hut, roofed with dried grass, and within it, a man sat cross-legged, his fat fingers interlaced over an enormous gourd that even fever had not succeeded in reducing to any appreciable extent, was Chai-Hung.

He sat alone, wrapped in a blanket acquired in one of his numerous raids, his feet crossed in front of him, his back resting against one of the poles that supported the building.

A matter of seconds the Commissioner of Police stared in mute fascination at this apparition. A prolonged scrutiny left no doubt in his mind as to the accuracy of Pennington's statement. Chai-Hung had been ill. There were dark rings under his eyes, his cheeks had fallen in, and the web of fat that hung from his jaw were suspended like the shapeless lines of a deflating balloon.

The bandit rose to his feet with a sudden effort, clutching at the pole for support. Presently he steadied himself and came slowly toward the spot where Hewitt was hiding, his head bowed, his eyes fixed on the ground.

He was almost supernatural. The Commissioner, fumbling for his hip-pocket, swayed sideways and broke the spell that held him. Scarcely conscious of what he was doing, he left the trees and, covering half the distance that separated them, leveled his automatic deliberately at Chai-Hung.

The Oriental did not flinch. He let the blanket slip from his broad shoulders and returned the other's gaze with a placid smile.

"You want to see me, Captain Hewitt?" he inquired with that oily smoothness he could pour over the habitual harshness of his intonation when he chose.

"I want you to put both your hands above your head, Mr. Chai-Hung, and to come with me immediately."

The bandit smiled again.
"May I ask where you propose taking me? It would be unkind perhaps to remind you that you have lost your wits?"

He lifted both arms as he spoke, apparently in accordance with Hewitt's request, and at that moment the Commissioner felt himself pinioned securely from behind. So suddenly and cleverly conceived was the attack that the Englishman was overpowered without a struggle, bound hand and foot with leathern straps swiftly and securely knotted. And, as he lay helpless at the bandit's feet, Chai-Hung signalled for the stool of carved blackwood that still remained outside his temporary residence.

"I am going to take you into my confidence, Mr. Commissioner," he said. "I am a desperate man, driven by your agents into a corner, to suffer privations that do not altogether agree with a man of my habits. I am ill, as you see, but I am going to recover. My wings have been clipped, but they will grow again. The Chinese Dragon, Captain Hewitt, many-headed—and each head has a fang. The corners of his evil mouth turned down. He has a mysterious intuition that indicates when one is being spied upon? I felt the promptings of that sense—last night. The man they call 'He Who Sees in the Dark' came to my house and you will understand me fully when I tell you that I returned the call. The man who brought this Pennington to me—I have dealt with. I have put out his eyes, so that he will never see again; I have removed his fingers, so that he may never point out the way. There are only three people in existence who stand between Chai-Hung and the freedom of movement he desires. You know them all, Captain Hewitt. There is Chinese Pennington, your sister—and yourself. Now, observe how cleverly I have separated them. You are already in my power, Pennington is waiting for nightfall—down by the apple-awamp, and Mrs. Vunry is alone in Dawson's bungalow—alone, because I have arranged that Dawson shall be kept away until I think it fit for him to return. He is a man of a moment and a preposterously exaggerated finger-nail pointed toward the Commissioner. 'Each shall perish in his turn, and each in a different manner. I am reserving you for the last, because I should like you to live long enough to realize the power of Chai-Hung, the inevitable triumph of The Yellow Seven. I think I can safely assure you that you will not have to wait long!'"

He reached for a branch and pulling himself to his feet, went slowly back to the hut, a hunch-backed cooie following him with the stool. Hewitt's prey to a host of unpleasant reflections, rose feebly at the thought that he had been so near to freedom in his immediate vicinity, and caused him to jerk his head painfully round. He saw a short, thick-set Oriental with a parang hung from his waist, leaning truculently against the jack-fruit tree.

"You will remember me, oh Englishman," said the sentry grimly. "An Lai-Ho, that was the servant of Hyde. It would be better perhaps to remain still!"

It was more than an hour before Chai-Hung returned. He was superbly clad in a mandarin jacket of blue embroidered with silver dragons, and the dwarf followed at a discreet interval, carrying a red umbrella and a Chinese tea-pot in a silver case. "I am on my way to take tea with your sister, Captain Hewitt," he purred maliciously. "Exercising my customary caution—I am taking my own tea!"

Quite apart from the imminent risk that the bandit held for her, Monica, although she would never have acknowledged it, was desperately curious to know how the duel between Pennington and Chai-Hung would end.

For a moment she had left the little, ramshackle train to accompany her brother to Dawson's bungalow, she had become haunted with a vague, indefinite fear that she was being followed. She had confided her fears to the Commissioner, but Hewitt, seeing in this sudden conviction still another symptom of the nervous trouble he had already noticed, had not expressed surprise.

"One gets odd notions in these parts," he told her easily. "It's that same queer restlessness you hear among the trees that gives rise to hosts of native superstitions."

The explanation had sounded logical enough but, on the afternoon of the day Hewitt had started out to meet Pennington, Monica encountered Chai-Hung himself in a narrow gully not a quarter of a mile from Dawson's house.

"Isn't it delightfully cool under the trees," she faltered as pleasantly as she knew how. She was aware of an uncomfortable feeling that Chai-Hung was a dangerous criminal with a price on his head, a celebrity, in fact, that she must deal with tactfully until she could get in touch with one of Dawson's men. To her mind letting him pass, in a hurry.

TOBIN WORKS AT FIRST

The fans who saw the opening game of the series between Minot and Bismarck last evening saw "Cherry" Dennison and Al Bernier hooked up in a pretty duel and some splendid fielding during the game, but they also saw Bismarck on the short end of a two to one score.

The breeze were chilly but the game was fast and the fight was warm. Minot drew first blood in the third inning. Spranger hit safely after Dennison had struck out and took second and third on a wild pitch. He scored on Gunther's single. Bismarck evened the score in the fourth inning. Bernier cracked one into right which Gunther tried to get but ficked and Al got two bases. He took third as Reider went out, second to first, and scored on McKnight's bouncer off Walters' glove.

Bismarck had three men on in the eighth but the punch to bring in the winning run was not there. Three fast double plays were executed for the fans, but the pitching of Bernier and Dennison featured. The former had nine strike-outs and the latter eight.

It was the first game for Bismarck here since Maurice McKnight took the reins as manager. Shanley was out of the game, having been spiked and McKnight played a fine game at second. Reider was back in right field, Newt Randall having passed on back to Duluth from Jamestown. Fryer, a Billings, Montana, man was in left. Eddie Tobin of Mandan crossed the river to play first and he did a fine job of it. He will be with the club all week. Tobin has always been regarded as one of the cleverest fielding first basemen in North Dakota.

Superintendent McClellan of the state training school also came over to umpire, the new league umpire not arriving in time.

Friday's game has been called off because of the fans always being present will be played Sunday. The drawing for the Ford car will take place on Monday.

Kinks o' the Links

Smith and Jones are playing a match game without endies. Smith's ball lies on the edge of the green about 30 feet from the hole. Smith's approaching putt is perfect and were it not for the fact that the flagstick remained in the hole would have dropped into the cup. Instead it bounded off and came to rest within about six inches from the hole. Is there any penalty because the ball struck the flag stick? Jones insists that it entitles him to the hole.

There is no penalty. Jones is in error in claiming the hole. Regardless of the distance a ball is played from, there is no penalty if it strikes the flag-pole. As a matter of fact Jones probably got the better of the break, since Smith would have probably holed out had the flag-stick been removed.

Player tees his ball and while addressing it preparatory to starting his swing, the ball rolls from the tee. Has the player the right to re-tee the ball and is there any penalty because the ball rolled from the tee as he addressed it?

There is no penalty and the player has the right to re-tee the ball under rule 2.

In playing out of a sand bunker a player grounds his club a yard or so from his ball before taking his stance. The grounding of the club in no way improved the lie of the ball. A contends there is no penalty since the club was grounded before the player took his stance. B contends a player must not ground his club in the bunker. Who is right and what is the penalty, if any?

A player must not ground his club in a bunker, even though it is no way improves the lie of the ball. B is right. In match play the play-

Jimmy Jones, Plucky Ohio Welter, Shows Many of Dempsey's Good Points

JIMMY JONES

By Billy Evans
Boston, Aug. 8.—A new star has burst forth on the pugilistic firmament.

Enter Jimmy Jones of Youngstown, O., at the expense of Dave Shade of California.

Jimmy Jones is a welterweight, a real one, able to make the stipulated weight of 142. Right now he looms up as the logical contender for the welterweight title, which has been carefully preserved in camphor balls ever since Mickey Walker won it from Jack Britton.

Fistic fame has been thrust upon Jones almost overnight. His decisive defeat of Dave Shade in this city of culture and manly art, ranks as one of the biggest upsets of the year.

Decisively Defeated Shade
I was fortunate enough to see the bout in which Jones was awarded the decision over Shade after 10 rounds of the fastest milling I have ever seen.

While Jones did not win by the proverbial city block, his margin at the finish was so apparent that there wasn't a dissenting voice in the immense crowd that packed the Arena Athletic Club.

When you consider that Shade, a popular favorite in Boston and picked to win at odds of 2 to 1, was handed the wrong end of the decision without a murmur from a single fan, it is evident that Jones clearly won the battle.

Over a year ago Jones met Shade at Canton, O. At that time Shade was a national figure in the fight game because of his showing against Jack Britton. Jones was comparatively unknown outside of Ohio.

Jones Has Improved
Shade beat Jones in that meeting, which was a no-decision affair. Shade had a clean-cut margin. He was too fast and too clever for Jones, who although he tried from the start to the finish, was just a little shy of the class shown by Shade.

When Shade agreed to meet Jones at Boston, he no doubt figured the Youngstown boy would prove no more troublesome than he did that evening at Canton.

Shade was treated to a real surprise. Jones has improved wonderfully in the last year. He refused to be felled out, refused to fall into the many traps that Shade laid, refused to be roughly handled by Shade without coming back with similar treatment.

Looks Like a Champion
Jones will make trouble for any welterweight in the world. Mickey Walker has more reasons to avoid him than Dave Shade. It will be interesting to see the attitude he takes toward the Buckeye sensation.

Jones reminds one of the style employed by Dempsey. He lacks the stylish footwork of Shade, and is not nearly so finished a boxer, yet he is clever in his own peculiar way.

Jones doesn't know what it means to back up. He is always coming in, carries his guard fairly high and can hit hard with either hand. Best of all, he is game and can take it.

Keep your eye on Jimmy Jones of Youngstown, O., you are certain to hear considerably more of him later on.

He looks like a champion. And he is as far as the New York commission is concerned.

By Billy Evans
Who will represent the United States in the Davis Cup matches, the tennis classic?

Bill Tilden and Vincent Richards carried the banner last year and failed to deliver. The defeat of these two great players was the outstanding upset of the tournament.

Despite the fact that Tilden and Richards once held the championship in the national doubles, they proved no match for Gerald Patterson and Pat O'Hara Wood, the Australian cracks. In this match Wood showed to great advantage.

There are some leading tennis experts who are of the opinion that Richards and Tilden, despite their individual prowess on the courts, do not make an ideal doubles team. Certainly they failed to display championship form last year.

The return to competition of Clarence "Peck" Griffin, has caused the rumor to be widely circulated that he and Bill Johnston, second ranking player, would seek to win the honor of being selected to represent the United States in the Davis Cup matches.

While Griffin has not played a great deal during the past two years, his recent fine work makes it seem that he has lost none of his old-time cunning. It has always been customary for Griffin to play with Johnston, hence the rumor that the two would seek the Davis Cup selection for the doubles.

Sandy Wiener, the Philadelphia youngster who is a protégé of Champion Bill Tilden, is showing constant improvement in his play. As a result, his name is being linked with Tilden as a Davis Cup possibility in the doubles.

The Kinsey brothers of California, who have always gone big in the doubles, loom up as contenders for the honor. Then there is the team of Dick Williams and Watson Washburn, not forgetting Vincent Richards and Francis Hunter. In several tournaments recently held Richards and Hunter have worked together well.

It is almost a certainty that Tilden and Richards will not be the selection of the tennis committee as the doubles representative in the cup matches. Who will be selected however, will probably be kept a secret until shortly before the event.

There is a strong possibility that the committee will ask the two Bills Tilden and Johnston—to be the doubles battery. This combination is generally regarded as the strongest that could possibly be selected.

er who grounded his club would lose the hole, while in medal play there would be a two-stroke penalty.

Puzzling Plays

THE PLAY
Here is a play made rather unusual, because the batted ball came into contact with the base runner.

With runners on second and third and the infield drawn in, the batter hit a ball through the shortstop. It was hit so hard the fielder was merely able to slightly intercept the hit. The ball went through the shortstop, and after hitting the runner going from second to third, was deflected in such a way it caromed in to short center field. The runner continued to the plate. The center fielder recovered the ball and made a perfect throw to the plate, getting the runner by a scant margin.

What about this play?
Is the ball dead when it hits the base runner? Can runners advance or be retired on such a play?

THE INTERPRETATION
After the shortstop had made a play on the ball, the fact that it struck the runner going to third made no difference. The ball was in play. The runner advanced at his peril. If the center fielder was able to throw him out at the plate, it was a proper play.

Hornby Explains Slump In Homers

By NEA Service
St. Louis, Aug. 8.—Last season Rogers Hornby of the St. Louis

Cardinals led the major leagues in home runs with 42 to his credit. This feat came as a surprise to baseball fans since Hornby while a pitcher batsman was never regarded in the light of a slugger.

This year Hornby is batting as well if not better than last season, his mark hovering around the .400 mark, yet he is not manufacturing nearly as many home runs.

While injuries have kept Hornby out of a goodly number of games, his home run total for 47 games is only 11.

What's the reason? Even Hornby hasn't the slightest idea.

"I didn't change my style last year when I made 42 home runs, simply took my usual healthy cut at the ball. I am doing the same this year."

The only reason I can offer for my falling off in the matter of hitting home runs, is simply because I am not hitting the ball as far. This perhaps is due to the fact that I am not connecting with the ball as solidly. Making a home run is like landing a knockout punch, you must hit the right spot."

LUQUE LOSES HIS GAME BUT WINS BATTLE

Mixes with Casey Stengel
When He Is Twitted After Being Knocked Out of Box

(By the Associated Press)
Chicago, Aug. 8.—Fisticuffs featured the monotony of the New York Nationals winning streak in Cincinnati yesterday when Adolpho Luque, the Reds Cuban pitcher, knocked out of the box, attacked Casey Stengel when the Giant outfielder twitted him for his generosity.

Luque won his game with Stengel, one to nothing, and the Giants beat the Reds, 6 to 2. It was their fifth of the Cincinnati series.

The Giants left for St. Louis with a lead of 7 1/2 games.

In Pittsburgh the Philadelphia Nationals continued their winning streak by defeating the Pirates, 7 to 5, and making it three out of four for their series there.

The St. Louis Nationals hit Barnes and Benton of the Braves and won the final game of the series with Boston, 7 to 5.

Thrilling battle in which eight pitchers took part was staged at the Yankee Stadium. The St. Louis Americans by using five pitchers to the Yankees' three, won in large numbers, 12 to 10. The St. Louis team made six runs off Shawkey and six off Jones. Mays was put in at the end. Ken Williams, Witt and Schleibner made home runs.

The Cleveland Americans swamped the Senators under a storm of runs without the aid of a single home run and won, 22 to 2.

The Philadelphia Americans trimmed the White Sox in Philadelphia, 6 to 2.

The Brooklyn-Chicago and Detroit-Boston games were called because of rain.

Arctic Traders
Sell Whiskey
Anchorage, Alaska, Aug. 8.—
Mystery ships plying the Siberian arctic laden with whiskey, which is bartered to the natives for furs, still take their toll of murder in the practical traffic, according to Captain Andrew Frederesen here, who says he was recently an innocent member of such an expedition.
The limit was actual murder, he says, when the Siberian government attempted to stop the traffic.
Captain Frederesen's story follows:
"We sailed out of Nome for what I was told would be a trading voyage to Siberia. I will not tell the names of the owners or skipper of the trader, for reasons best known to myself. At one port the boat took on a large quantity of furs after getting the natives drunk on moonshine whiskey. An official of the Siberian government came aboard to collect a tax and force payment for the furs. He was thrown overboard and shot. The last I saw of him he was clinging to a piece of ice. I do not know whether he died or was rescued.
On the cruise back I heard talk of murdering me because I knew too much. For nights I didn't sleep, and while I rested in the bunk I kept a revolver in my hand ready for action."

British Immigrants Gave Initial Impulse to Athletic

Buenos Aires, Aug. 8.—"Beauty parading" and idle street flirtations, heritage of the Spanish colonial days, are becoming extinct pastimes in Argentina. The devotion given by Argentine youth to out-door sports in the last decade, first by the young men and now in growing measure by the young women, is held accountable for the change.

Twenty-five years ago, the young men of Buenos Aires, stuffy attired in black, with high poke collars and French patent leather shoes, devoted their holiday and Sunday afternoons to strolling along the avenues or loitering on street corners with an eye out, mainly, for pretty girls. The girls, decked out with the knowledge that they were to be admired, devoted the same afternoons to
"coche" riding, forming a "beauty parade" as the vehicles drew them along the avenues past the groups of young men with whom they might exchange smiles and flirta-tious glances. This was about all the outdoor exercise Argentine young folk took in those days, say the older generation.

Today in Buenos Aires there is hardly a vacant lot on a Saturday Sunday or holiday afternoon that is not the scene of a football game.
Tennis matches are in progress on hundreds of courts, golf balls soar over the fairways of eight different courses, swift racing sculls cleave the waters of the River Lujan, propelled on unbarred arms, on running tracks young men in spiked shoes seek to make records in the hundred meter dash, the hurdles and like events, swimming, basket ball and boxing have numerous devoted, while young men of wealth indulge in polo and crack yacht races on the River Plate. The formal Sunday-afternoon black of a generation ago has been succeeded by light tweeds, homespun, flannels and sport clothes. The young men have less time to flirt, while the young women have not entirely abandoned the old Spanish custom of "beauty parading," for a semblance of it can still be seen along the Calle Florida at the noon hour on week days, they, too, as if discouraged by the death of admirers on holidays, have returned to outdoor sports in increasing numbers. Infected first by golf, tennis and swimming, they have begun to indulge in track meets, stimulated doubtless by the example of their American, British and French sisters in the Northern Hemisphere. Several of these "toreros atleticos femeninos" have resulted in the formation of two feminine athletic clubs and now it is proposed to found the Argentine Feminine Athletic Federation.

The British immigrants are credited with giving the initial impulse to athletic pursuits in Argentina by introducing their outdoor games and pastimes, together with "Sábado Ingles," as the Saturday half-holiday is called. Favored by a temperate climate, it has gathered such momentum within the past few years that many observers think Argentina will soon take its place among the "outdoor nations" of the United States and Great Britain.

Encouragement of outdoor sports is one of the special policies of President Alvear, who shows his interest by kicking off at a big football game and attending many sport events, while he sets an example himself as a devoted golfer.

Demand For Silver

May Bring Shortage

New York, Aug. 8.—The use of silver in the motion picture industry and amateur photography, and the great demand for silver jewelry are responsible for a growing demand of such large proportions that Robert Linton, President of the North Butte Mining Company, predicts a shortage of the metal in the future.

In a statement on the subject
Mr. Linton declares that 5,000,000 ounces of silver are used in photography each year. This is the largest single factor in the increasing demand in the United States.

The Orientals take great quantities of silver for adornments, the white metal being favored by them for use in jewelry. China acts as a crafty trader in silver, buying up immense supplies of it on low market and holding them until the price soars again, Mr. Linton says.

In the face of this increased demand comes the intelligence that the world's production is declining. The rich silver mines are nearly exhausted and no new ones have been struck. Silver is now,
Mr. Linton declares, chiefly a by-product of copper and lead mining, and the larger copper and lead mines are producing less silver.

BLANKET WRAPS
In England the younger generation is reported to be wearing blanket wraps, composed of a perfectly straight piece of cloth slung around the shoulders, and kept in place by a cord. To slip on after tennis or to wear in the cool of the evening these garments are ideal.

HAND-PAINTED ROSES
A white taffeta frock with a full skirt and a close bodice is trimmed with hand-painted red roses and an occasional blue ribbon.

Arctic Traders Sell Whiskey

Anchorage, Alaska, Aug. 8.—Mystery ships plying the Siberian arctic laden with whiskey, which is bartered to the natives for furs, still take their toll of murder in the practical trade, according to Captain Andrew Pedersen here, who says he was recently an innocent member of such an expedition. The limit was actual murder, he says, when the Siberian government attempted to stop the traffic. Captain Pedersen's story follows:

"We sailed out of Nome for what I was told would be a trading voyage to Siberia. I will not tell the names of the owners or skipper of the trader, for reasons best known to myself. At one port the boat took on a large quantity of furs after getting the natives drunk of moonshine whiskey. An official of the Siberian government came aboard to collect a tax and force payment for the furs. He was thrown overboard and shot. The last I saw of him he was clinging to a piece of ice. I do not know whether he died or was rescued. On the cruise back I heard talk of murdering me because I knew too much. For nights I didn't sleep, and while I rested in the bunk I kept a revolver in my hand ready for action."

Uphold Tradition Of Chinese

London, Aug. 8.—A Chinese father's right to chastise disobedient and unjust sons is illustrated in a case in the Civil Court of Wei-hai-wei, and mentioned in the annual report of that colony. Two sons had attempted to deprive their aged parent of property reserved for his personal use after the remainder of his belongings had been divided. Asked in court why he had not punished the ofenders for their greed, the father replied that he was not strong enough. But as the unfortunates who are both over forty years of age, now appeared submissive before the magistrate, the parent gladly seized the opportunity to administer the overdue correction with a strap supplied to him in court. The sons took the medicine for their moral health without a murmur, while the old man was delighted.

Argentine Men Show New Interest in Out Door Exercises

NO VACANT LOTS

British Immigrants Gave Initial Impulse to Athletic Pursuits

Buenos Aires, Aug. 8.—"Beauty parading" and idle street flirtations, heritage of the Spanish colonial days, are becoming extinct pastimes in Argentina. The devotion given by Argentine youth to out-door sports in the last decade, first by the young men and now in growing measure by the young women, is held accountable for the change. Twenty-five years ago, the young men of Buenos Aires, stiffly attired in black, with high poke collars and French patent leather shoes, devoted their holiday and Sunday afternoons to strolling along the avenues, loitering on street corners with an eye out, mainly, for pretty girls. The girls, decked out with the knowledge that they were to be admired, devoted the same afternoons to "cooing" riding, forming a "beauty parade" as the vehicles drew them along the avenues, the groups of young men with whom they might exchange smiles and flirtatious glances. This was about all the outdoor exercise Argentine young folk took in those days, say the older generation. Today in Buenos Aires there is hardly a vacant lot on a Saturday, Sunday or holiday afternoon that is not the scene of a football game. Tennis matches are in progress on hundreds of courts, golf balls soar over the fairways of eight different courses, swift racing sailboats cleave the waters of the River Plate, propelled on sunburned arms, on running tracks young men in spiked shoes seek to make records in the hundred meter dash, the hurdles and like events, swimming, basketball and boxing have numerous devotees, while young men of wealth indulge in polo and crack yacht races on the River Plate. The formal Sunday-afternoon black of a generation ago has been succeeded by light tweeds, homespun, flannels and sport clothes. The young men have less time to flirt. While the young women have not entirely abandoned the old Spanish custom of "beauty parading," for a semblance of it can still be seen along the Calle Florida at the noon hour on week days, they, too, as it discouraged by the dearth of admirers on holidays, have taken to outdoor sports in increasing numbers. Infected first by golf, tennis and swimming, they have begun to indulge in track meets, stimulated doubtless by the example of their American, British and French sisters in the Northern Hemisphere. Several of these "torneos atleticos femeninos" have resulted in the formation of two feminine athletic clubs and now it is proposed to found the Argentine Feminine Athletic Federation. The British immigrants are credited with giving the initial impulse to athletic pursuits in Argentina by introducing their outdoor games and pastimes, together with "Sabado Ingles," as the Saturday half holiday is called. Favored by a temperate climate, it has gathered such momentum within the past few years that many observers think Argentina will soon take its place among the "outdoor nations" like the United States and Great Britain. Encouragement of outdoor sports is one of the special policies of President Alvear, who shows his interest by kicking off at a big football game and attending many sport events, while he sets an example himself as a devoted golfer.

Those who know Broadway well realize the Gay White Way has a heart, after all. A well-known writer "went broke" recently, and was in danger of going "over the hill" to the poorhouse. Mildred Soper of the "Passing Show" helped raise $262. "Now he's on his feet again."

Demand For Silver May Bring Shortage

New York, Aug. 8.—The use of silver in the motion picture industry and amateur photography and the great demand for silver jewelry are responsible for a growing demand of such large proportions that Robert Linton, President of the North Butte Mining Company, predicts a shortage of the metal in the future. In a statement on the subject Mr. Linton declares that 5,000,000 ounces of silver are used in photography each year. This is the largest single factor in the increased demand in the United States. The Orientals take great quantities of silver for adornments, the white metal being favored by them for use in jewelry. China acts as a crafty trader in silver, buying up immense supplies of it on a low market and holding them until the price soars again, Mr. Linton says. In the face of this increased demand comes the intelligence that the world's production is declining. The rich silver mines are nearly exhausted and no new ones have been struck. Silver is now, Mr. Linton declares, chiefly a by-product of copper and lead mining, and the larger copper and lead mines are producing less silver.

PITCHING DUEL EXCITES FANS AT PARK HERE

Minot Squeezes Out on Long
End of Score in Hot Tussle Between Pitchers

TOBIN WORKS AT FIRST

The fans who saw the opening game of the series between Minot and Bismarck last evening saw "Cherries" Dennison and Al Bernier bookend up in a pretty duel and some splendid fielding during the game, but they also saw Bismarck on the short end of a two to one score.

The breeze was chilly but the game was fast and the fight was warm. Minot drew first blood in the third inning. Spranger hit safely after Dennison had struck out and took second on Gunther's single. Bismarck evened the score in the fourth inning. Bernier cracked one into right which Gunther tried to get but kicked and Al got two bases. He took third as Reider went out, second to first, and scored on McKnight's bouncer off Walters' glove.

Bismarck had three men on in the eighth but the punch to bring in the winning run was not there. Three fast double plays were executed for the fans, but the pitching of Bernier and Dennison featured. The former had nine strike-outs and the latter eight.

It was the first game for Bismarck here since Maurice McKnight took the reins as manager. Shanley was out of the game, having been spiked and McKnight played a fine game at second. Reider was back in right field, New Randall having passed on back to Duluth from Jamestown. Fryer, a Billings, Montana, man was in left. Eddie Tobin of Mandan crossed the river to play first and he did a fine job of it. He will be with the club all week. Tobin has always been regarded as one of the cleverest fielding first basemen in North Dakota.

Superintendent McClellan of the state training school also came over to umpire, the new league umpire not arriving in time.

Friday's game has been called off because of the funeral of the late President Harding and a double header will be played Sunday. The drawing for the Ford car will take place on Monday.

Kinks o' the Links

Smith and Jones are playing a match game without caddies. Smith's ball lies on the edge of the green about 30 feet from the hole. Smith's approaching putt is perfect and were it not for the fact that the flagstick remained in the hole would have dropped into the cup. Instead it bounded off and came to rest within about six inches from the hole. There, any penalty because the ball struck the flagstick? Jones insists that it entitles him to the hole.

There is no penalty. Jones is in error in claiming the hole. Regardless of the distance a ball is played from, there is no penalty if it strikes the flagstick. As a matter of fact Jones probably got the better of the break, since Smith would have probably holed out had the flagstick been removed.

Player tees his ball and while addressing it preparatory to starting his swing, the ball rolls from the tee. Has the player the right to re-tee the ball and if there any penalty because the ball rolled from the tee as he addressed it?

There is no penalty and the player has the right to re-tee the ball under rule 2.

In playing out of a sand bunker a player grounds his club a yard or so from his ball before taking his stance. The grounding of the club in no way improved the lie of the ball. A contends there is no penalty since the club was grounded before the player took his stance. B contends a player must not ground his club in the bunker. Who is right and what is the penalty, if any?

A player must not ground his club in a bunker, even though it in no way improves the lie of the ball. B is right. In match play the play

Jimmy Jones, Plucky Ohio Welter, Shows Many of Dempsey's Good Points

JIMMY JONES

By Billy Evans
Boston, Aug. 8.—A new star has burst forth on the pugilistic firmament.

Enter Jimmy Jones of Youngstown, O., at the expense of Dave Shade of California.

Jimmy Jones is a welterweight, a real one, able to make the stipulated weight of 142. Right now he looms up as the logical contender for the welterweight title, which has been carefully preserved in camphor balls ever since Mickey Walker won it from Jack Britton.

Fistic fame has been thrust upon Jones almost overnight. His decisive defeat of Dave Shade in this city of culture, and manly art, ranks as one of the biggest upsets of the year.

Dave, Shade, the fighter whom Champion Walker studiously avoided, until the New York Boxing Commission became so peeved that it forfeited the writer title to Shade, as far as the New York state is concerned, was used by Jones as a stepping stone to fame.

Decisively Defeated Shade
I was fortunate enough to see the bout in which Jones was awarded the decision over Shade after 10 rounds of the fastest milling I have ever seen.

While Jones did not win by the proverbial city block, his margin at the finish was so apparent that there wasn't a dissenting voice in the immense crowd that packed the Arena Athletic Club.

When you consider that Shade, a popular favorite in Boston and picked to win at odds of 2 to 1, was handed the wrong end of the decision without a murmur from a single fan, it is evident that Jones clearly won the battle.

Over a year ago Jones met Shade at Canton, O. At that time Shade

Little Chance of Tilden and Richards Forming U. S. Davis Team Again

By Billy Evans
Who will represent the United States in the Davis Cup matches, the tennis classic?

Bill Tilden and Vincent Richards carried the banner last year and failed to deliver. The defeat of these two great players was the outstanding upset of the tournament.

Despite the fact that Tilden and Richards once held the championship in the national doubles, they proved no match for Gerald Patterson and Pat O'Hara Wood, the Australian cracks. In this match Wood showed to great advantage.

There are some leading tennis experts who are of the opinion that Richards and Tilden, despite their individual prowess on the courts, do not make an ideal doubles team. Certainly they failed to display championship form last year.

The return to competition of Clarence "Peck" Griffin, has caused the rumor to be widely circulated that he and Bill Johnston, second ranking player, would seek to win the honor of being selected to represent the United States in the Davis Cup matches.

While Griffin has not played a great deal during the past two years, his recent fine work makes it seem that he has lost none of his old-time or who grounded his club would lose the hole, while in medal play there would be a two-stroke penalty.

Puzzling Plays

THE PLAY
Here is a play made rather unusual, because the batted ball came into contact with the base runner.

With runners on second and third and the infield drawn in, the batter hit a ball through the shortstop. It was hit so hard the fielder was merely able to slightly intercept the hit. The ball went through the shortstop, and after hitting the runner going from second to third, was deflected in such a way it caromed in to short center field. The runner continued to the plate. The center fielder recovered the

Hornsby Explains Slump in Homers

By NEA Service
St. Louis, Aug. 8.—Last season Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Cardinals led the major leagues in home runs with 42 to his credit. This feat came as a surprise to baseball fans since Hornsby while a batsman was never regarded in the light of a slugger.

This year Hornsby is batting as well if not better than last season, his mark hovering around the .400 mark, yet he is not manufacturing nearly as many home runs.

While injuries have kept Hornsby out of a goodly number of games, his home run total for 67 games is only 11.

What's the reason? Even Hornsby hasn't the slightest idea.

"I didn't change my style last year when I made 42 home runs, simply took my usual healthy cut at the ball. I am doing the same this year."

The only reason I can offer for my falling off in the matter of hitting home runs, is simply because I am not hitting the ball as far. This perhaps is due to the fact that I am not connecting with the ball as solidly. Making a home run is like landing a knockout punch, you must hit the right spot."

LUQUE LOSES HIS GAME BUT WINS BATTLE

Mixes with Casey Stengel When He Is Twitted After Being Knocked Out of Box

(By the Associated Press)
Chicago, Aug. 8.—Fisticuffs featured the monotony of the New York Nationals winning streak in Cincinnati yesterday when Adolpho Luque, the Reds Cuban pitcher, knocked out of the box attacked Casey Stengel when the Giant outfielder twitted him for his generosity.

Luque won his game with Stengel, one to nothing, and the Giants beat the Reds, 6 to 2. It was their fifth of the Cincinnati series.

The Giants left for St. Louis with a lead of 7 1/2 games.

In Pittsburgh the Philadelphia Nationals continued their winning streak by defeating the Pirates, 7 to 5, and making it three out of four for their series there.

The St. Louis Nationals hit Barnes and Benton of the Braves and won the final game of the series with Boston, 7 to 5.

Thrilling battle in which eight pitchers took part was staged at the Yankee Stadium. The St. Louis Americans by using five pitchers in the Yankees' three won in large numbers, 12 to 10. The St. Louis team made six runs off Shawkey and six off Jones. Mays was put in at the end. Ken Williams, Witt and Scheibner made home runs.

The Cleveland Americans swamped the Senators under a storm of runs without the aid of a single home run and won, 22 to 2.

The Philadelphia Americans beat the White Sox in Philadelphia, 6 to 2.

The Brooklyn-Chicago and Detroit-Boston games were called because of rain.

LAWS HALT QUICK WORK IN MATRIMONY

Red Tape Proves Exhausting Matter to Bridal Couples in Europe

SIX WEEKS JOB

Matter of Citizenship Is Disturbing Element to All Countries

Moscow, Aug. 8.—When the American Congress passed a law annulling the previous rule that a foreign woman automatically became an American citizen by marrying an American, it put Herculean difficulties in the path of Dan Cupid in the document cursed countries of Eastern Europe most frequently by a certain type of young American men at an age when they are very susceptible to pretty foreign girls and matrimony.

The American Relief Administration, the Near East Relief, the Y. M. C. A. and other organizations which since the war have conducted relief operations in Poland, Austria, Greece, Russia, the Balkans and the Baltic states sent hundreds of young Americans, mostly former army officers, into cities noted for their charming girls.

Before the law became effective last September, marriages of Americans to these girls were relatively easy, although even then it involved digging into records for documents, more documents and still more documents. Once this was accomplished, however, all the young Americans had to do was to go to the nearest American consulate, have his wife's photograph pasted on his passport, and, if he was ready, could take her home an automatic American citizen and show her proudly to his folks.

But today things are different. A few weeks ago one young member of the Near East Relief mission in Armenia got a brief vacation and came through Moscow on his way to Warsaw to marry there a lovely Polish girl who had waited for him two years. They had met when he was with the American Red Cross and she a nurse on the Polish battlefields against the Russians.

"I'll be back in ten days; save a room for us at the hotel," the American said blithely and confidently as he left Moscow.

Six weeks later he returned, with his bride, having miraculously untangled miles of red tape and overcome, with the assistance of every official, Polish and American alike in Warsaw and Moscow, obstacles that left both bride and groom too tired to enjoy a honeymoon.

In Poland a woman automatically takes on the citizenship of her husband and, therefore, should lose her Polish passport. American rules, due to the new law, prevent consuls from pasting foreign wives' pictures on husbands' passports. One cannot enter Russia without a passport, and it is particularly difficult for a Polish subject to secure a visa to enter Russia at all. America law required this couple to have two passports, his American, her's Polish. Polish law and the Russian difficulties in the way of Poles entering, required them to have one, and this American.

Finally the young man prevailed upon the Polish authorities to give his wife a Polish passport, and upon an American consular official to give him a letter stating the couple had been legally married, although the bride was not an American citizen. The worried bridegroom pasted his wife's picture on the letter, attached the letter to his own passport, and finally got through.

OVERLAND HAS ITS BEST YEAR FINANCIALLY

Company's Successful Season Continues It Among Strongest Concerns

That this is by far the greatest year in the history of the Willys-Overland Company is shown by the financial statement issued by that company for the first half of 1923. Coincident with the issuance of this statement, the entire remaining balance of $6,943,000 due to complete the payment of $17,357,500 in bonds owed by the company was authorized this week, leaving the company without any bank indebtedness of any character.

Statement shows net earnings of $7,932,385.66 after allowances for taxes, interest and special reserves. The ratio of current assets to liabilities is a little better than two to one with cash and drafts of over $9,000,000 on hand.

Of the earnings shown for the first six months, over $2,000,000 was earned in June.

The figures shown on this statement are significant of the extraordinary progress which Willys-Overland has made during the past four years under the personal leadership of John N. Willys, who for more than a year has devoted his entire time to his Willys-Overland interests at Toledo.

During that time production has advanced from fourteenth place to second among the members of the Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

During the first six months 107,063 cars were built, an increase of more than 14,000 over the biggest first six months in the previous history of the company. Each month of the past four broke a record, June production being more than 22,000 cars and July pro-

Camp Perry, O., Aug. 8.—Zing! "It's a bull's-eye."

They'll be saying it here soon in a score or more of tongues.

For crack shots from every corner of the globe are coming to the International and National Rifle Matches on Perry's range, September 1-27.

European nations are sending their most expert marksmen. So are the South American republics. And Canada, Australia and New Zealand, too.

Stealing the championship from the United States is their one big ambition.

The Palma Trophy—most coveted of all rifle awards—will be in competition again for the first time since 1913.

And there'll also be the DeWar Match. Every type of rifleman, whether he be Scheutzen crank, small bore, or military long-range shot, will have an opportunity to shoot his way to a berth on the international team this year.

They'll All Be There

More than 2000 already have signed up. Tryouts are on now in all parts of the United States.

Adjutants general and reserve officers are getting out their men. The Army, Navy, Marines, Reserve Officers' Training Corps and Citizens' duction being in excess of 23,000 cars. Production has been maintained at this status for several months—the maximum for any one day being 1109 cars on July 31st.

One of the big factors in the increased production of Willys-Overland this year was the introduction of a new car, the Overland Red Bird, in a price field that was not occupied by any other maker. Sales of this new car have been maintained steadily at more than 200 per day since it was launched in May, and the demand at the present time, although the car is only built with an open touring body, is in excess of twice the production.

One of the first problems undertaken by Mr. Willys on his return to Toledo last September was the establishment of a large list of financially able and aggressive dealers.

In the face of the fact that other automobile companies have tried in vain to increase their dealer organization during the year, it is particularly significant in reviewing Willys-Overland financial improvement to note that the list of Willys-Overland active, aggressive dealers has increased since January 1st from 3074 to more than 5561, and Mrs. Willys stated that the number is increasing more rapidly than at any time during the year.

Another factor in the improved position of Willys-Overland is the greatly increased popularity of the Willys-Knight car. Mr. Willys took up the Willys-Knight motor nine years ago when it hadn't a friend in the country and has steadily developed it in the face of considerable opposition among poppet valve engine manufacturers until today it is one of the leading cars of its price class. Plans for production of Willys-Knight cars include an enlargement of plant capacity, which will increase by 50 per cent the present output of Willys-Knight cars in 1924.

Captain Moody Staten, of Seattle and Spokane, is on his way to Liberia, Africa, to become commander-in-chief of the Liberian army. Staten, shown here with his wife and child, is a veteran of the World War and a former student at the University of Washington.

Military Training Corps and college and club sharpshooters are banging away at their own targets every day.

American trial matches for the International team are scheduled for August 1-15 on service ranges. Only one Yank absolutely is sure of a place, according to observers. He's Walter Stokes, world champion.

United States Senator Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa, president of the National Rifle Association, has been in Europe interesting riflemen in the Perry contests. And Secretary F. H. Phillips Jr., has been negotiating with the secretary of the Pan American Union in Washington.

First Matches in '97

The first ten days will be devoted to the School of Instruction. National matches, including the Palma and the International Small Bore DeWar events, will be shot off from September 10-17. International Free Rifle matches are set for the next two days. The remainder of the time will be taken up with the National Individual and Team events.

International Free Rifle Matches had their inception in 1897. Switzerland won the title that year. In 1898 France got it. The following year it reverted to the Swiss, who held it until 1914 when the war knocked out further matches until 1921.

The Palma Trophy, awarded first in 1876 and won then by the United States, really perpetuates the match between Ireland and America. Yank teams won it again in 1877 and retained it until 1901.

Great Britain and Canada each had it for a while. It came back to this country in 1913.

Many standing records probably will be shattered here in September. Since the war, the rifle has gained thousands of new friends.

And the popularity of the sport seems to be increasing as the days roll by.

palms and ferns given standing room in the fireplaces of the American embassy for the occasion.

Tradesmen holding the royal favor have to be reckoned with in the entertainment provided by American diplomats. The caterers are virtually chosen for the American entertainers by the lord chamberlain of the royal palace, no unknown or plebeian chef being permitted to cook for the king or queen. Decorative florists and a train of other tradesmen having the royal approval also must be selected by the American host and their word, as well as their bills, go a long way in directing the function.

Entertainment occasionally of the rulers of the nations to which they are accredited is an inescapable duty of American diplomats, who are provided with no entertainment fund to cover the costs of food and service. A few are wealthy enough to bear extraordinary expenditures for social entertainment, but the poorer ones say that the war has not toned down the "class" of the required social duties.

The higher standing abroad of the American dollar is said to help some in bearing the expense, but in many cases local tradesmen add to their bills, in the cases of the "rich American" diplomats, more than sufficient to meet the difference in the rate of exchange.

SWEDEN FAILS TO APPROVE PEACE PACT

Says That It Does Not Have Universal Character

MEMBERS LACKING

Recommends That Compulsory Arbitration Should Be Provided

Stockholm, Aug. 8.—The Swedish government has just published its reply to the inquiry circulated by the General Secretary of the League of Nations as to whether the various members of the League favored a special pact for general reciprocal guarantees, stating that, in its present form, and under present conditions, the government cannot endorse the proposal.

The Swedish reply says that as long as the United States, Germany and Russia are not members of the League it cannot be looked upon as having a universal character. Sweden and authority during its three years of operation, it cannot yet be considered strong enough to deal effectively with the larger international problems which are at present menacing the peace of the world, and Sweden thinks that the guarantee system proposed would be of little value without the powerful authority that might come from universality of membership.

The government holds that if Sweden, with her stabilized relations with foreign countries, were to sign the guarantee proposed she would expose herself to comparatively larger risks than those of other states. It would be impossible to say the reply, for a Swedish government, under the present status of political unrest in the world, to promise to the representatives of the people that they enter into international obligations which might lead to military measures not compatible with Sweden's own vital interest and national independence.

Meanwhile, the government repeats a recommendation previously made to the effect that compulsory arbitration should be provided for all disputes of a judicial nature. And it hopes that conditions develop to such a point in the future that any disturbance of political peace will be considered the enemy of all nations, and that such a disturber will be punished by the joint action of all nations.

PRODUCTION OF OVERLAND UPHOLDS HOPES

Willys-Overland production and sales for 1923 have upheld the hopes of President Willys expressed at the beginning of the year. Shipments of Overland and Willys-Knight cars to the end of June, as shown by statement issued by John N. Willys, President of the company, total 106,149. This is the largest six months' production in the history of the company.

Barbara La Marr, movie actress, has adopted a second child, according to dispatches from Rome, where she is filming a play. The latest lucky one is an orphan girl, Rosa Secardi. The child will be taken back to Hollywood with Barbara.

The company produced 93,435 cars, the second best record, while last year, the first six months' production totaled 43,783 cars. By producing in June 22,162 cars a new mark was set for a month, when according to popular impression the motor industry begins to feel the initial slowing up of summer sales.

LIGNITE COAL TARIFFS GIVEN IN NEW BOOK

For First Time Complete Tariffs of State, Valuable to Lignite Industry, Given

Putting in his time over distance tables, maps, and the many tariffs of the rail carriers in North Dakota during the hours that other men play golf and seek entertainment, V. E. Smart, traffic expert for the Railroad Commission has completed and published a fifty nine page book containing the rates on lignite coal from practically every shipping point in the State to every destination.

Coal Shortage Incentive

During the coal shortage last year Mr. Smart spent much time in St. Paul for the North Dakota Commission in the interest of North Dakota getting its proper portion of such coal as reached the Lake Superior docks, and concluded that if recurrences of coal shortages were to be avoided in North Dakota it could best be done by promoting the use of North Dakota's own natural resource. Upon returning to Bismarck he set about the task of compiling the distances from mines to destinations via the shortest or cheapest available route, has given considerable attention to switching rates at junction points, and has shown as destinations every sidetrack in the State where freight may be received in carlots.

fuel. He is particularly interested in consolidated schools, and states that their fuel might well be purchased in carlots, stored under ground, and possibly one of the side tracks shown would yield a lower rate from the mine than the more distant station where the agent is located, or where the local coal dealer would deliver the coal in wagon load lots.

He states that the large mine operators have encouraged the dealers whom they supply to make a special price to carlot buyers including schools if purchased early in the season. Mr. Smart states that the mines are always operated to capacity when the first cold weather arrives, that storing in a supply a little earlier will help to avoid the congestion of orders, resulting delays, and increased price of the fuel.

Instructions Contained

Instructions for using the book are contained in the front of the book as well as the railroad company's rules governing minimum weights on both open top and box cars.

Routing directions that go with the distance and rate are indicated by symbols fully explained in the front of the book.
